LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

- Well, winter lingers, that is sure,
Within the lap of spring,
With coat and furs around me wrappedOf April do I sing.
Where is the genial, balmy air,
Of which the poet prates?
There is a marrow-curdling wind,
That seems suggesting skates!
I write these lines on an April day,
Within the firelight's glow:
Outside the noses, punched and red,
Sniff nervously for snow.
But ere my rhyme gets into print,
And many a reader greets,
The linen duster may be seen,
Curvating through the streets,
The perspiration trickle down,
The 'kerchief be unfurled,
In honor of our climate queer,
Unequaled in the world!

City stores are now seen at their best, Like Easter bounets they assume a brighter appearance at this period. Among the finest displays of goods is that of A. Screation & Co., 149 Dundas street, where any thing and everything usual and requisite to a first-class drygoods house is to be procured. Special features of this well-known establishment are its carpet and current departments. With commendable enterprise the firm has secured the sole agent of the largest carpet factories in the world especially that of John Crossiey & Son, Halifax, England. Screaton & Co. import direct from headquarters, their patterns are made expressly for their own trade, and those in need of carpets may be assured of getting the superior quality which has made the name of Crossiey & Son famous. In the curtain line Screaton & Co. are prepared to offer special inducements. They have them in all shades, sizes, qualities and prices. They are making a specialty of fine Brussels net and Swiss curtains, and also carry an elegant assortment of portiers. These two departments are under the personal supervision of Messrs. Screaton and Bartlett-a guarantee in itself of their completeness.

The Kings of Minstrelsy.

A bumper house is assured for Primrose & West's minstrels on Friday night, the advance sale being rapid. G. H. Primrose is a former London boy, Primrose & West have established their claim to be called the "kings of modern minstrelsy." The jokes are fresh, timely and new, and the dances, particularly the clog dancing, extremely interesting. On the whole, the performance is claimed to be the best ever given by the company, and all who like an evening spent in listening to merry jokes, bright music, pretty ballads and clever marching and dancing, should not fail to gratify their taste by a visit to Primrose & West's minstrels. The feats of the Borani Brothers appear almost impossible to men of flesh and bone, and their flexibility in their various tumbling feats is little short of marvelous. The laughable sketch, "Trouble in Blackville," which ends the performance, sends all home in a paroxysm —Donations to the Convalescent Home are gratefully acknowledged. The list of donors appears in the advertising columns of this issue,

—The Young Liberals had another splendid rehearsal last evening. The choristers are rapidly attaining perfection. One of the best features of the coming performance will be the drills by two separate brigades in elaborate uniforms. The roles and specialities will be new and bright.

Ex-Alderman Charles Taylor, who left the city a week or two ago under unusual circumstances, has not yet returned, much to the disappointment of those gentlemen with whom he was financially liable for the debts of the Ontario Mutual Fire Insurances Company, now deceased. The ex-alderman is known to be residing with relatives in Chicago. It now transpires that before he departed to live under the "Stars and Stripes," he made a conveyance of some of his property to Mr. W. H. Wigmore, Mr. Taylor was a surety in the company to the extent of $10,600, though his actual liability, occasioned by its insolvency, would not reach that amount. Money was borrowed on the strength of his guarantees from the banks, principally the Molsons. The Molsons Bank has now taken out a writ to set aside the conveyance of the property to Mr. Wigmore, on the ground that it was made with fraudulent intent to shirk the liability. Ex-Alderman Charles Taylor, who left -Mrs. Thomas Hodgins, mother of the late Raiph Hodgins, died Monday at the residence of her daughter-in-law, 283 Talbot street, at the ripe age of 69 years.
