CHAPTER XXIV.

"I was born in Naples, Italy," Tina began, when she and Lord Holborn were seated in the arbor: "but a cloud hangs over that event which has shadowed my whole life. My mother was a lady born, the daughter of a French hoble who was reduced almost to poverty by mistortune after misfortune, and who, to hide his mortification on account of it, retired to Florence, where he resided until his death. There my mother, who is said to have been a wild, impulsive girl, met and loved a young artist, and their fondness for each other being bitterly opposed by her parents, the lovers eloped and came to Naples. Here I am told they lived very happily until a few months after my birth, when my father received a summons away on business months after my birth, when my father received a summons away on business of importance. He did not tell my mother the nature of his business nor where he was going, and seemed much disturbed and excited when she questioned him regarding it. Indeed, he never told her anything concerning his family or antecedents, and she, loving him devotedly and trusting him entirely, was content to let the matter rest until he should see fit to confide it to her. He promised to write to her, but she never received a line from him, and never neard from him again."

"Never?" exclaimed Lord Holborn, in a startled tone,

"No. For months she hoped against hope, believing in him, and that he would return. She searched his trunk, his desk-everything that belonged to would return. She searched his trunk, his desk-everything that belonged to him—to find something that would tell her where he had gone, or where his friends resided, that she might write to them, and obtain tidings of him. But she found nothing, not even a name, to give her a clew, and what alarmed her more than all was that she could find no certificate or record of her marriage with him. This was a fearful blow to her, and gradually the belief was forced upon her that she had been wronged and deserted. It broke her heart, and her health began to fall; her means gave out, and at last in despair she returned to her home in Florence, to find her mother dead, and her father—so bitter in his anger at her conduct that he refused her even shelter. As a last resort she sought aid of the friend of her childhood, who tenderly cared for her while she lived, and gave me a home, rearing me as one of her own children after her death. Her father—my grandfather—died just one month after his daughter, without ever having looked upon my face. I was carefully reared and educated, and had a luxurious home until a little while before you saw me in Brussels, where crecumstances occurred that seemed to make it necessary that I should go out into the world to care for myself."

"And have you never learned anything regarding your father or his family?" Lord Holborn asked, without seeming to notice how very reserved she had been in speaking of the family with whom she had been reared.

"Nothing," Tina replied, sadly, 'for the

"Nothing," Tina replied, sadly, 'for the impression prevailed among my mother's friends that there had been no legal marriage, and the subject has always been invoiced."

"And do you bear the name by which your father married your mother?"
"I have always borne it until I was obliged to go among strangers," Tina said, in a constrained tone.
"Then Florienz is not your real name. I have thought so."

"Then Florienz is not your rear name.
I have thought so."
"Yes, it is my real name. I have merely dropped the surname of—Demaire."
"Demaire!" cried Lord Holborn, in surprise. "Demaire was the name of Lawardsford before her marriage; but she had no brothers, and I know of no other family by that name."

"No; but—Lady Carisford had a son who was named Louis Arthur Demaire Carisford. My father married my mother under the name of Arthur Demaire," and Tina looked up anxiously into her lover's face to see how he would receive this startling information. face to see how he startling information.

He was very grave.

"But he died very young—nearly twenty years ago—and very suddenly, too."

"Nearly twenty years ago and very suddenly." Tina said, catching her breath; then, clasping Lord Holborn's arm almost convulsively, she cried, excitedly: "Do you suppose—can it be possible, that sickness—death overtook him, and that was why he never came back to my mother? Oh if I could think that—if I could believe that he intended her no wrong, I could be almost happy again."

again."

"It is very strange," the young lord said, thoughtfully, and not yet feeling quite sure that the Earl of Carisford's son was the man at all. "Have you nothing that belonged to him which would prove his indentity—a scrap of his handwriting—some trinket?"

"I have only this, and I think it may be the only link that will serve to unite my destiny with his," the young girl said, drawing from her neck a slender gold chain, to which was attached a peculiar ornament.

Lord Holborn took it from her and examined it closely.

heirloom, and which you, dear reader, learned long ago.

She also told him about her conversation with the earl, during which she had made the startling discovery that his son was doubtless her father.

"But how?" she cried, all her pride aroused and her heart turning bitter at the thought. "I may owe my being to him—his blood may be coursing in my veins, and yet I have no right to call him father or bear his name. Oh, it is dreadful to feel thus. Who am I? What am I? What right have I to an honorable place in the world?" she concluded, almost passionately.

"I shall try to see you every day," he resumed. "I shall acquaint my mother tonight with my—our plans for the future. Tomorrow I shall ride over to talk with the earl and Lady Arlesbury, and then, my darling, you shall serve no one in any capacity; at least." he added lightly, "until you serve me with these fair hands at our own board."

Again Tina shivered; she was inexpressibly happy in the knowledge of this noble man's love; but something seemed to oppress her, and to warn her that the ordeal through which she would be obliged to pass during the next few days would be almost more than she would have strength to bear.

She looked at him in surprise.

I am ready to meet the whole world with you; and I hope you do not think that I am such a craven as to fear to be seen walking with my betrothed wife."

your future shall be bright, without a cloud to mar your happiness, if I can make it so."

Tina sighed heavily.

She realized, if he did not, the obstacles that would be piaced in his way to prevent the union he contemplated, unless their marriage should be consummated secretly, and that was something she would never consent to. Her mother's unhappy experience was a warning not to be ignored.

"Have you shown this ornament to the earl? Perhaps he could tell you something to relieve your mind." Lord Holborn said, after a few moments of grave silence.

"No," she answered, with a shiver: "If I should show it to him and tell him how I came by it, it might prove to him that his own son was guilty of a great wrong, of which he believes that he was incapable; and then he, almost the only friend that I have, would despise me. Besides I do not wish to sadden his life, which is none too happy at the best."

"My dear one is considerate for every one save herself," he said, gently adding: "I trust we shall find some way to explain this sad mystery. Meantime we will take all the comfort we can in our present happiness. The greatest evil that could possibly come to me would be lose you or to lose your love. Will you remember this, Tina?" he asked passionately.

"Yes, I will remember; but whatever happened, I could never cease to love you." The City League series opened last night with two games at the Jubilee rink. Both games were too much one-sided to be of interest. The St. John's A. C. defeated the Arlingtons by a score of 9 to 0, and the Collegiate team were of 9 to 0, and the Collegiate team were much superior to their opponents, defeating the Lacrosse Club by 12 to 0. The St. John's team comprised: Glover, goal; Beltz, point; H. Kerrigan, cover-point, and T. and W. Woolley, J. Bray and C. McLoud, forwards. THE STRATFORD JUNIORS DEFEAT GUELPH.

Guelph, Ont., Jan. 9.—One of the scheduled games of the Junior O. H. A. was played here tonight between Stratford Juniors, last year's champions, and the Wellingtons, of Guelph. The visitors proved to be better stick-handlers, and showed the grapful training which they showed the careful training which they have had. Their combination work was good, and although the home team were in the game all the time, the visitors scored 3 in the first half and 4 in the last half, while the home boys only secured 2 goals in the last half. The play cured 2 goals in the last half. The play was fast, and the referee was kept busy watching the players, who were inclined to roughness at times. Off-sides were very frequent with the Stratford boys. Only one Stratford man was ruled off for roughness. The referee, Mr. Crawford, of Toronto, gaye the best of satisfaction that could be, and held the players down to their places impartially. SARNIA ON FRIDAY.

Sarnia is making great preparations for the annual hockey journey to London, which will be made tomorrow evening. The Tunnel Town is organizing an excursion, and has brought together a "hockey band," which is said to put any previous musical organization in the shade. The club have placed tickets on sale at several stores. Buyers of tickets at these places will be enabled to avoid the crush at the box office. London's team is working hard. Some excellent practice in goal-shooting was made, and the hockey enthusiasts may be confident that the red, white and black will make a good showing. Sarnia is making great preparations for a good showing.

Tomorrow night's game will decide whether Sarnia has a chance for chamwhether Sarnia has a chance for championship honors. The boys from the river side have strengthened their team considerably, and their defeat of Tilbury on Tuesday evening showed that they are getting in form without loss of time. They have succeeded in bringing out some of the old stand-bys, and expect to put their very strongest seven against London on Friday.

On Monday the juniors journey to Guelph, where they run up against the fast Wellingtons.

Slowly and almost oblivious to the waning light the lovers wended their way back to the mansion.

Some surprise had been expressed by different members of the party within regarding Lord Holborn's protracted absence. Lady Holborn was very anxious to get away, for it would be quite dark before they would reach home, and her call had already been extended far beyond Charles R. Rankin, of Stratford, has been agreed upon as referee by both Sarnia and London, and has consented to act on Friday. The game will be called at 8:15 p.m., in order to allow the visiting contingent plenty of time to get to the rink.

Arrangements are being made for the special hockey train from Sarnia to stop at Strathrov and Watford on the way down, and also on the return trip, to enable a number of enthusiasts in these towns to take in Friday night's game. The excursion promises to be a big success, and a large crowd is assured. said, glancing impatiently at the clock upon the mantel. Lady Arlesbury said, reassuringly. "Perhaps he has encountered the earl, and they are talking over the question of improving the condition of the tenantry. You know that is a hobby with papa. I wish I could persuade you to lay aside cess, and a large crowd is assured.

I wish I could persuade you to lay aside your hat and remain to dinner."

"It would be impossible. We promised Addie we would be at home in season to dine," Lady Holborn said, in reply to this cordial invitation; then rising, she persisted in going to the door to look for her son.

She was followed by the hospitable Lady Holborn and her daughter, both of whom had particular reasons for treating her with the utmost civility; but they were all struck dumb upon beholding Lord Holborn and Tina mounting the steps arm in arm. In an instant Lady Holborn's eyesight became defective, and the ever-ready glass was elevated to get a view of the strange scene, while her face settled into stern rigid-WELLINGTONS ARE STRONG. Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 9.—The first game the senior series of the O. H. The game was fast from the toot of the whistle to the finish, and was remarkable for the clean hockey played, and by reason of year members were and by reason of not a man being sent to the fence. The visitors were strong in every point. At half time the score was 5 to 2 in the Wellingtons' favor, and at the finish 12 to 5. while her face settled into stern rigid-

Lady Arlesbury shot dagger-like glances at her offending lace-maker, while Gertrude, crimson with anger and mortification that his lordship should have left her side to meet, as she believed, this insignificant girl, mentally resolved that she should be packed off, bag and baggage, out of his way the first thing the next morning.

"Really, Ernest, you have kept me waiting until I am entirely out of patience," Lady Holborn began, with deep displeasure, adding, with something of irony in her tone, "and I am not pleased to know that you have been amusing yourself unworthily at my expense. Whom may this person— Ah!"

Something in her son's eye warned her that it would be wise for her to leave her sentence unfinished, so she merely added, as she turned haughtily from Tina:

MAY RESULT FATALLY. Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 9.—After a ten-round boxing match before the Atlantic City Athletic Association last night, Lewis Majane, a local pugilist, fell to the floor in a faint. The men were evenly matched, and a fast bout resulted. In the eighth round Majane began evenly thatched, and a last bout resulted. In the eighth round Majane began

FEW HONEST FIGHTERS. Chicago, Jan. 9.—Vice-President Roosevelt, in an interview on prize-fighting, said: "Boxing might have been going on in New York right now if the men who had charge of the clubs had handled it with credit. They made a mistake by not stopping contests when they became brutal, or when it was manifest to all that one of the contestants had no possible chance of winning." He cited the Jeffries-Sharkey bout, which, he said, "should have been stopped at the end of the 23rd round, as it became brutal after that, and Sharkey had no chance." Mr. Roosevelt characterized the McCoy-Corbett fight as a "sell out," and added that there are only a few honest fighters. Chicago, Jan. 9 .- Vice-President Roose-

A FIERCE CRUSADER

Mrs. Nation Will Stir Up the Kansas Saloons When She Gets Free.

Wichita, Kansas, Jan. 10 .- Mrs. Carrie Nation, who was arrested for de-stroying $5,000 worth of property in the "swell" saloon of Wichita, and who is now quarantined in jail, is re-ceiving hundreds of letters from every part of the country praising her courage. Many have asked her to lecture in the towns where the writers live. But Mrs. Nation does not intend to go on the lecture platform when she is released from jail. She intends immediately to go to work and smash up a few more saloons in Kansas. Just where she is going to light next she does not indicate, but some saloon will be a wreck very soon after the vigorous crusader is let out of prison.

Mrs. Nation is a good-looking woman,

50 years of age. She is a prominent member of the Kansas City W. C. T. U. She has been twice married. Her first husband died of alcoholism, but her present husband is a prosperous attorney, who takes very little interest in alcoholism morally or physically. He even refused to attend his wife in her present troubles, and she herself says she does not want to see him around,

Ten years ago Mrs. Nation was living at Medicine Lodge, the home of Jerry Simpson. Saloons were running there at full blast. Mrs. Nation put a num-ber of them out of business by smashing the fixtures, and put a number of the proprietors into the penitentiary. Since that time the liquor traffic there has languished She next went to Kiowa, and all visible signs of saloons evaporated a short time after her arrival. Next she came to Wichita.

Swearing Off.

One day the engine of a western freight train broke down and the only passenger, a traveling preacher, got out and worked with the track crew, pulling, hauling and heaving as vigorously as the rest. He knew some thing about the machine and was indeed quite capable of running an engine himself; so he was able to consult with the men and advise them to some purpose. The work was carried on under a vigorous flow of profanity, which seemed to be quite unconsidered-a mere matter of habit.

, Finally, says the Rev. C. T. Brady, who tells the story, I suggested an interruption to he swearing, adding that I was a preacher. The head breakman dropped his crowbar with a look of abject astonishment. Everybody else let go at the same time, and the engine settled down. The men looked at me with amusing consterna-
