con is willing, in fact, anxious, to sign with the Pittsburg Club. The backdown from the firm stand which he took early in the season is attributable to various facts. The Buffalo club has been proving a losing venture. The Deacon and Jack Rowe have been practising considerably with the Buffalo players, and while Rowe finds himself in his old form and able to field and line the ball out as yore, it has leaked out from the players that the Deacon is nowhere. A combination of failing eyesight and a bad attack of rheumatism, which seems to have come to stay, has practically unfitted him for the ball field. So the deacon is only too willing to make a grab for a big share of the $4000 release money offered him by Pittsburg besides the big salary they agreed to pay him. Rowe will stay in Buffalo.
