been possible only through, the medium of our credit system. The capital to operate and further these enterprises is contributed in a large measure, by many, although a few large capitalists generally take the lead. But both small and large investors have confidence and are willing and eager to trust their accumulations to the management of others, in the expectations of fair returns. To this confidence, to this facility for obtaining credit, it is due that companies can be founded for the purposes most useful and beneficial. It is not the individual ownership of money, but credit, that bridges the morass, spans the land with iron rails and the sea with copper wires, and is building, spinning, making and gathering all that can be built, spun, made or gathered.

A customer secured is a promise of greater salary in time.
