which the bloodiest records of human strife are marked upon the pages of warfare; and who knew but we were marching to another combat that would live in history to add one more record to the bloody calendar? We knew that 10,000 men were in our front, and out of that number Death could reap a sufficient harvest to immortalize the day.

under the guidance of our men, who were in one of the quiet villages that lay to the right of the main road. They had been ordered to remain in their homes, and that mutual friendship is never enough in boys, but grown into a feeling of brotherly love.

"Not at all, sir; not at all. I'm only a little insouciant upon the jest question; will you try a pinch of snuff?" and M'Alvey offered the acceptable powder to myself and the now appeased Cotter.

A CHEQUERED CAREER. In Texas, recently, a youthful hero has turned up, whose adventures far eclipse the ordinary ten-cent romance. His name is Lehman Bookmeyer. His parents, eight years ago, lived on the banks of a clear, babbling brook, in a secluded valley.

The Cologne Gazette estimates the army which Russia can place in the field at present at 600,000 men. This strength may be maintained but cannot be increased.

THE VOLUNTEERS DRAW SWORDS—A STAMPEDE.

On Saturday evening the Montreal Garrison Artillery and the Montreal Cavalry were drilling on the Champ de Mars, and the usual miscellaneous, nondescript crowd was looking on.

"Officers, non-officers, et soldats!" "The general commanding the 1st Brigade of the 2nd Division 5th Corps, late Army of the Loire, has to congratulate the 5th Battalion and that portion of the 2nd Battalion, and La Compagnie Irlandaise of the Regiment d'Evreux, now in Saint-Marc, with the spirited energy they have shown under the privations through which they have passed, and the order and discipline that they have observed under the trials of the last ten days.

"Bravo, bravo," said Dr. Macken, as he emptied the contents of his cup.

"There's a beauty," said M'Alvey, pointing to a hideous-looking German, whose clothes were opened at the breast. A large hole, around which the clotted blood had hardened, was observable just over the region of the heart.

"Yes," said the middle-aged man, "and those are the stars we made you see at Bunker Hill."
