

Tuesday, September 13.—Was present at a clerical meeting held at the Rectory, Nannerch.

Wednesday, September 14.—Received a letter from Sir Stephen R. Glynne, enclosing me a donation for the College, for himself and his brother the Rector of Hawarden, and at the same time requesting me to preach the Annual Sermon for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, in their Parish Church, on Sunday, the 9th of October, with which I complied.

At 2 o'clock, Canon Williams, Mrs. Williams, and myself, left in their carriage for Llanvair Rectory, in the Vale of Clwyd, to dine with the Rector, the Rev. E. J. Owen. The distance was seventeen miles, through a most picturesque and fertile country.

Thursday, September 15.—Attended the consecration of St. Peter's Church, Llanbedr, by the Bishop of St. Asaph. Before I left the Rectory of Llanvair, Mr. and Mrs. Owen gave me a donation for the College, £5.

Friday, September 16.—After finishing some correspondence, I took my leave of Mrs. Williams and their interesting family, from whom I had received so many marks of kindness and attention during a sojourn of a week, at the hospitable Rectory of Nannerch, and accompanied Canon Williams to Gwersylt, in North Wales, about fifteen miles distant, to attend a meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, at 7 o'clock.

Saturday, September 17.—Mr. Clayton, a large proprietor of coal mines, with whom I stayed last night, drove me to Wrexham, where I took the train for Chester and Liverpool. The latter place I reached about six o'clock, and drove directly to the residence of the Rev. G. W. Warr, who had invited me to stay with him during my sojourn in that city, and by whom I was warmly received.

Sunday, September 18.—Drove to St. Anne's Church, Aigburth, in the suburbs of Liverpool, and preached the Annual Sermon for the Society. In the evening, I preached for the same object in St. Saviour's Church, of which Mr. Warr is the popular Incumbent.

Monday, September 19.—Accompanied Mr. Warr to Birkenhead, to attend a meeting of the Society for the Propagation of
