Two Simple Pies.

Sift one level teaspoon of baking powder and half a level teaspoon of salt with two cups of flour; rub in one-half cup of lard or butter, and mix with water until stiff enough to roll out. With this paste line one rather deep pie plate and gash in several places. Have the edge cut with a pastry fork to make it crimped. Bake and when cool fill with stewed berries and cover with beaten cream; serve at once.

For the second pie line two plates, one deep and the other of the same size cut as flat as possible for plate to be found. Bake these, and use for an upper and under crust for the following filling: Heat two cups of milk, add one-quarter cup of corn starch made smooth with a little cold milk, and cook five minutes. Add about two rounded tablespoons of sugar and two eggs beaten. Cook until the egg thickens, and flavor with vanilla.

Many of the new evening gowns are made narrow, with short trains, the overskirt showing bunches of rose leaves and forget-me-nots in the designs and coming high above the waistline, the back arranged with double box pleats, left unconfined and showing, the high-waisted bodice having a girle and a fichu of black mousseline edged with a white lace forming a V in front caught up to the girle with a chain. The tight sleeves have ruffles at the elbow.

The Daily Hint From Paris

DIFFERENT, BUT BECOMING.

The draped hat is of narrow velvet white, with rose-colored backing. The facing, of pale ice-blue satin, is pleated and softly around the crown inside. At the edge of the brim it is folded over onto the outside, where it disappears under the velvet drapery. The only trimming is a brilliant rhinestone bow. The Russian turban is of seal brown plush, with a fancy feather ornament, resembling a large white flower, set in another of iridescent feathers.

Towels in Plenty.

Have plenty of dish towels and a line on which to dry them. Have several sets of these cloths, two for china, two for glassware and three for the tin and crockery ware. Allow them to be used only for their legitimate branch of the dish washing, and change once a week for clean ones all around. The dishes will look nicer and the towels will be more easily kept clean than if you go about it the usual way.

Cloth Fine, Too.

No matter how beautiful the display of silver, cut glass and china, if the linen is not of the finest satin damask, in keeping with the gorgeous decorations, the dinner table is a failure.

Scorched Linen.

If linen has been scorched in the ironing the marks may be removed by making a paste of fuller's earth and white soap, moistened with a little vinegar and the juice from a boiled onion. If this mixture is spread upon the marks they will quickly disappear and no stain should be visible after the linen has been washed. Sometimes it will be found sufficient to rub over the place that has been scorched with a raw onion. Afterwards wash the linen as usual and the stain will probably have disappeared.

Short Trains.

Many of the new evening gowns are made narrow, with short trains, the overskirt showing bunches of rose leaves and forget-me-nots in the designs and coming high above the waistline, the back arranged with double box pleats, left unconfined and showing, the high-waisted bodice having a girle and a fichu of black mousseline edged with a white lace forming a V in front caught up to the girle with a chain. #### A Shopping Expedition.

Have you ever taken your baby shopping? Well, take my advice, don't. I have often watched wee babies being jostled thru a shopping crowd; and my heart ached for the poor, wee mite and for his weary mother. And I always declared: "I'll never take a baby downtown."

But what is one to do? Well, I stayed at home. Months and months passed and I never saw the corner of Yonge and Queen, and I became so stupid that I didn't know where the elevators were.

No, it isn't a good thing to stay away too long. If you must go downtown and simply cannot leave the baby with any person, try to go very early, before the pushing crowds begin, and don't stay long.

If your experience is anything like mine, you will not want to go shopping with a baby! I didn't intend to, but was finally persuaded from this noble resolve by the saint-like knowledge of all about babies.

"That child's no trouble. Why, he'll be like a lamb. And you simply must have him fitted for good shoes."

We went. The ride on the street car was fine, everyone enjoyed it. Then, too, it was great fun to see a lot of other babies sitting pretty boots. We enjoyed that, too, until the time came to walk in the new boots. That was a revelation. One supposed in baby wisdom that in such queer places babies were carried. And the baby mind decided that henceforth baby would walk among such delightful, interesting objects, and when the chance offered baby would run.

He did—extensively—and his mother, with tight lips and hat brim, followed him, but where it was supposed to stay, did frantically between comfortable-looking couples, bumped with out apology against eye-glasses, shopkeepers and grabbed a wriggling bit of bewildered infant.

Peeps were especially fortunate in meeting such a "saint-like" baby. Really they were delightful. Such trouble as they went to, and such patience as they showed gave the one bright touch to a very gray day.

And then coming home! A poor, tired, exceedingly un-lamblike baby, quite past his sleeping time, made things interesting for the passengers on the street car, and completely shamed his usually proud guardians.

And when the aunt—who knows all about babies produced a small package of peppermint, the baby's mother, after a long and weary wait, submitted to the inevitable and a baby contentedly munched the hot things as if they spelled "perfect happiness." And his mother resigned herself by thinking that one more unknown thing added to a morning of perplexities couldn't matter very much.

GIRL READY TO RENOUNCE NEGRO

Lucille Cameron Said to Have Consented to Listen to Her Mother's Appeal.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—(Can. Press).—The federal grand jury today began its investigation into the Jack Johnson-Lucille Cameron affair with a view to learning whether the negro pugilist has violated the Mann act by causing the Cameron girl and other young women to be brought to this city for illegal purposes.

Mayor Harrison today ordered the chief of police to have all the music and other forms of entertainment in the negro pugilist's cafe on the south side immediately stopped.

At the close of her hearing before the grand jury Miss Cameron became hysterical and had to be removed to the office of the United States deputy marshal. She will appear before the jury again tomorrow.

Later it was said that the girl had finally yielded to the leadings of her mother, Mrs. Cameron-Talbot of Minneapolis, and consented to return to her home, renouncing the pugilist.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC BYLAW WILL PROBABLY CARRY

city in the legislature, has been a declared supporter of public ownership, and a friend of hydro-electric power in its passage thru the legislature.

A Local Question.

Mr. Preston declined to be interviewed by The World, which wished to ask him what he thought the Liberal party would do with the hydro-electric system if some turn of fortune should bring the party back into power. Mr. Preston's paper, however, takes the position that hydro is strictly a local question in Brantford, and that the bearing on other municipalities which its adoption would have, should be decided on the basis of the consideration of the case. Brantford, says The Examiner, has favorable rates now. Brantford got those rates thru the competition of the hydro-electric system. Brantford does not need to bother further with it. Some who take this view admit that Brantford must, sooner or later, accept the services of the Hydro-Electric Commission, but would postpone it at present.

Evades the Point.

But the hope that that underlies the whole issue is utterly evaded by this course of reasoning. The hydro-electric system, which has begun to take shape in the minds of the municipalities, cannot survive unless the municipalities stand together. Mr. Preston must know very well that all the electric corporations in Ontario are leagued together to destroy the hydro-electric system if it is possible, and every blow against the hydro-electric system is a blow against the municipalities. The municipalities made of friendship for the hydro-electric system or as a system outside Brantford. Brantford cannot consistently say that she has obtained her favorable rates with the aid of the other municipalities and then declare that she has no further responsibility towards those municipalities. But The Examiner avoids this direct issue and evades to questions of local rates.

The World also saw Lloyd Harris, the first of the Liberals in parliament to declare against reciprocity, and one of the most prominent and well-regarded men in the city. He is a quiet, frank man with The World and only asked not to be mentioned.

"If anyone can convince me that it could be made to pay in Brantford if it is rotten let me know and have it power from the hydro," he told The World. His position is also that of The Examiner, but he goes a step further, but that he loves Brantford more, and therefore he must give hydro what Caesar got in the fifth rib.

Not Fighting Principle.

"I am not fighting the principle of the hydro," he said to The World, "but merely contending for the more favorable local conditions which we have against the hydro. The World propounded to Mr. Harris the question which Mr. Preston waved aside—What he would do if the Liberal party had to take charge of hydro."

"I would have a thorough investigation, and if it is rotten let me know and have it power from the hydro," he told The World. His position is also that of The Examiner, but he goes a step further, but that he loves Brantford more, and therefore he must give hydro what Caesar got in the fifth rib.

Bernhardt Writes for Sunday World

Another big feature has been secured by The Toronto Sunday World, namely, a series of articles written by Madame Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest actress in the history of the stage. These articles written by the Divine Sarah herself come to The World from Paris, absolutely unchanged, and needless to say, this arrangement has involved an enormous amount of expense. The Toronto Sunday World has secured the Canadian rights for this feature, which will appear in only a few papers in the States and Canada.

Madame Bernhardt writes on all sorts of topics of interest to women and draws largely from her wide experience as a woman and artist in her articles. This is easily the biggest and most costly feature that ever appeared in a Canadian newspaper. An article will appear every week in The Sunday World, beginning next Sunday. Don't miss a single issue.
