The organization of 1853, modified by the changes of 1873, was in itself imperfect. The adoption of federa-tion in 1887, by which the university became a teaching body with provision for the grouping of arts colleges around it was a complete reversal of the conditions under which the University of London was selected as the model constitution. The various governing bodies have thus been partly a reflex of the British and partly of the American models. Upon the effect of this on the prestige of the university, on the strength and coherency of its policy, and on the dis-cipline of its students there is no need to dwell. Dealing with the board of governors, the commission observes that the history of the provincial university has demonstrated the disadvantage of direct political control.

PART POLITICS HAS PLAYED.

"Despite the zealous efforts of statesmen and educationists, the university became on many occasions in times past the sport of acrimonious party disputes. Its interests were inextricably confused in the popular mind with party politics, altho with these it had in reality little concern. The various ministries which at different times since 1839 had tried to reconstruct the system of administration, instead of handing over to the authorities of the university the carrying on of its 1. The powers of the crown in respect to the control and management of the university should be vested in a board of givernors, chosen by the lieutenant-governor-in-council, and subject by the method of appointment and by the regulation of their proceedings, to the perpetual authority of the state.

2. The senate, with its legislative and executive powers and based upon the participate of representations of the faculties and graduates, should direct the academic interests of the university.

3. The School of Practical Science should be united with the university.

Commercial success, not to speak of commercial supremacy, depended, said Mr. Ellis, upon controlling to the utniost degree possible the cost of every been ar element that entered into the production and distribution of commercial The Cardinal Facts.

The cardinal facts of the present situation he described as simple but mportant. Seven municipalities had subscribed a sum of $15,000 to pay the ost of an enquiry. After exhaustive investigation the commissioners had reported, indicating that great and unexpected benefits will be derived from an independent municipal development

Their recommendations were based upon the perception of two governing facts. First, power may be delivered to consumers at cheaper prices under an independent municipal development than are obtained otherwise. If the provincial government had undertaken to carry out a new and independent municipal development than are obtained otherwise. If the provincial government had undertaken to carry out a new and independent municipal development.

CATTLE EMBARGO DEBATE HAS UNSATISFACTORY CONCLUSION

Talked Out Without Division and Several Reasons Are Given for Speaker's Refusal for Closure.

(Canadian Associated Press Cable.) London, April 7 .- In the house of ommons Friday Mr. Cairns, M.P. for Newcastle, moving the second reading of the Diseased Animals Act Amendment bill, sketched the history of the act since 1896, and the continued hostility that had been shown it by reason of the fact that under its provisions foreign and especially Canadian cattle, could not be landed alive at our home ports. This bill did not affect Ireland; yet the Nationalists had announced their intention of opposing it. It was eminently desirable to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle. The Canadian government habitually complained of the restriction, inasmuch as Canada was free from disease, If there was any risk, he would be the last to express himself in favor of the Cattle Healthy. During the last ten years 1,250,000 Canadian cattle landed here, not one suffering from foot or mouth disease or anthrax. For every one of the Canadian cattle killed for suffering from tuberculosis there were 101 home cattle destroyed. He argued that the sooner we had these healthy animals mong the home herds the better. Mr. Price, M. P., seconding, said the quality of stock had gone down under operation of the act of 1896. It was not suggested that any risk of disease be taken. Canada was free from di-

W. O'Brien, M. P., said if the bill passed 200,000 holdings in Ireland would be rendered unprofitable.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman said personally he preferred the old system by which matters of this kind were left to the discretion of responsible ministers.

If the embargo were suddenly removed it might cause nervousness in many parts of the country. As to the policy of admission of Canadian cattle he thought the house should be left to determine these matters without interference. The government
