regulations enforced recently will, while they may increase imports of British periodicals here, at the same time hit directly at libraries, news and magazine dealers, as well as the newspapers, is causing a lot of discus-newspapers, is causing a lot of discussion amongst those interested.

One of the first effects will doubtless be that United States publishers are going to frame up all the reprisal measures they can lay their hands to. The World has become directly aware of this enforced attitude by the fact that one prominent United States newspaper has already struck this newspaper off its list of exchanges—which means that one newspaper gives a copy of its own publication gives a copy of its own publication for that of another.

if a man wants to read a United States publication, will he turn to reading an English one? reading an English one?

Newsdealers tell The World that nearly one hundred times as many United States publications are read here as English periodicals or papers.

Should a man be practically forced to choose his reading?

The recent change in the postal rate on newspapers and magazines interchanged between this country and the United States is so radical and important that there is a great conflict of opinions as to its ultimate result.

"Of course," said a postal official yesterday, "any expression of opinion as to the probable effect of the new regulations at this date would be quite. premature and practically only guesswork. We have received a circular from Mr. R. M. Coulter, the deputy postmaster-general, advising us that on and after May 8 next an advance that practically quadruples the postmaster on newspapers and periodicals.
