STANDS OVER.—Heard in the appellate division at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday, the case of Kerrigan against Harrison (an appeal by the defendant against the judgment of Chief Justice against the judgment of Chief Justice Falconbridge, given on October 31, 1919) stands over by consent. J. M. McEvoy appeared for the defendant and J. A. E. Braden for the plaintiff. Edythe Kerrigan, the plaintiff in the case, asked for a right-of-way to a cottage at Port Stanley. The lake washed away the right-of-way which was originally the right-of-way which was originally granted. The appeal of the defendant, Emma Harrison was against a judgment that the original agreement should be valid despite the action of the lake. SYMPHONY CONCERT TUESDAY.

Dr. Cameron Wilson was instrumental in having three amendments made to the proposed legislation. One of these provides that the plan drawn up to govern the development of the city in the future be approved by the council before being submitted to the railway board. The second provides that the council may at any time disband the town planning commission, and the third provides that the council must vote on the appointment of a commission even after the Legislature has approved its formation.

Today.

City Solicitor T. G. Meredith is today making an examination of the town planning legislation prought hefore the solicity and the bill was referred to the solicitor.

Ald. John Bridge contended that the council would have full control of the commission, as it would appoint four of the seven city members. It would not be necessary to appoint the commission if the council did not wish to do so, and in this way the provisions of the act would not become operative. He pointed out that the city was definitely in accord with a master plan, having set aside money for a topographical survey. Although it might cost $50,000 it would be money well spent.

The general provisions of the act would appoint a commission of twelve members to control the development of the city and an urban zone, extending three or five miles into the surrounding extending the council would have full control of the

[By POET BILL.]

The Poet Bill is about to undertake a series of articles about his life on the railroad, which will appear from time to time in The Advertiser. As a preliminary, he asked an Advertiser reporter to visit his baggage car on the London, Huron and Bruce Line Monday afternoon. It turned out to be the most amazing baggage car on the whole Grand Trunk System. Bill is a home man, although he spends most of his days on the railroad. When he isn't in Wingham he carries the atmosphere of home about with him, and to better get the effect he has The Poet Bill is about to undertake atmosphere of home about with him, and to better get the effect he has filled every one of the eight windows in his bargare car with fascinating little flower boxes, from which nod crimson geraniums, gay foliage plants and delicate flowering balsams. The whole car is scrupplously clean, and every variety of baggage has its place, just as in a well-ordered home. Indeed the Poet Bill's car is a curiosity on the Grand Trunk line. It is as unique as Bill himself.
