In the police court today a man named Finley, charged with harboring a dog and not returning it to his owners, contended that he owned the dog. The witness identified the dog in court as his and pointed out some distinguishing marks. George Foster testified that he gave the dog to Nelson when it was at the age of three weeks and identified the dog. Policeman Gibb gave evidence about the young man boasting with him and having the dog all the time except for five days after December 1, in charge of the Salvation Army. (Halifax Echo.)
After several days of negotiations the longshoremen of the city have achieved their objective and will go to work this morning at the new rate of wages fifty-five cents an hour for day work, and sixty-five for night work. The new schedule was announced at the annual meeting of the association held yesterday afternoon. The agreement is to last for six months. M. D. ALLEGED OBSTRUCTION OF OFFICIALS
Ernest Friess pleaded not guilty to a charge of obstructing Prohibition Inspector Henderson in the pursuance of his duties as an inspector. W. M. Ryan appeared for the prosecution.

Inspector Henderson testified that he went to the Empress House, King square, with Inspector Killen on Saturday, and they went into the vestibule. While there he said they saw Mr. Friess at the head of the stairs and he pulled a rope to open the door for them. On entering the room he saw George Galbraith pick something up and rush into another room with it. They started after Galbraith but said the defendant jumped in the way. The witness pushed him to one side but he jumped back again. The second time he was pushed aside he tripped over some furniture and fell over. They went into the room where Galbraith was and found him in the act of raising out a pitcher, which the witness said, smelled strongly of liquor. On a table near there they found two glasses. These articles were produced in court and identified.

POLICE COURT
Arthur Kennedy pleaded guilty to being drunk but said he didn't remember assaulting his sister, Leo Kennedy, brother of the accused told of the accused having struck his sister, Mrs. Kennedy, in a house in Sheriff street. Kennedy was fined $8 or two months imprisonment for drunkenness and two months without fine for assault.

A boy pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing grain from the C. P. R. H. H. McLean, appeared for the C. P. R., and J. A. Barry for the accused.

Constable Castello told of meeting the accused in the yards of the C. P. R. with a sack on his back on Saturday. He said he had got it from a car and that it contained cracked corn. He value, he said, was about $4. He knew that grain was sometimes taken from freight cars after they had been unloaded but it was not supposed to be.

The boy told practically the same story and said that he had got the corn for his grandmother's hens. J. A. Barry told of seeing boys getting grain from cars on the West Side. He said as the boy had not attempted to conceal anything from the officer he showed no criminal intent.

Mr. McLean said that it was not the value of the grain taken that it was the fact that several of the cars had their lining damaged by boys doing as they were doing. He said he would make some inquiries and see what could be done. If possible, he said, he would refer the case to the magistrates.

The preliminary hearing of a case against Ernest Northrup, charged with the theft of clothing to the value of about $125 from Murray Jarvis in his office at 74 Prince William street, was commenced today with the evidence of Mr. Jarvis and then allowed to stand over until tomorrow afternoon. W. M. Ryan appeared for the defence. The accused pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Jarvis told of having two suits and three overcoats in a closet in the office of C. E. L. Jarvis, 74 Prince William street. He last saw them within a week of the time of the fire there which occurred on December 26. Two suits and an overcoat in court were identified as part of the goods missed. The accused had been in their employ for about four months and during that time had carried out his duties in a very faithful manner. He had a key to the office.
