H.C. OF L. NOT HEARD OF IN NEW ZEALAND

Imported Goods Are Scarce, But
Food Is Not Yet Restricted

Farmers Prosperous—Single and Married
Men Without Families Are Already Called Up There

An interesting sidelight on conditions in New Zealand at the present time is shown by R. T. McQuade, a New Zealander, who is at present in Toronto on a buying expedition for one of the largest wholesale dry goods warehouses in New Zealand.

"New Zealand is so short of imported goods which we usually get from England," said Mr. McQuade to The Star, "that I am over here to see if we can get goods in Canada, but I find that manufacturers here seem to be so full of business that they cannot look as far as New Zealand and Australia for business at the present time. No doubt, however, they will be glad to do business with the colonies when things become normal."

Speaking of food supplies and the present high cost of living in Canada, Mr. McQuade said: "When I left there they had no restrictions with regard to food, as the quantities of butter, cheese, frozen mutton and beef were in excess of the freezing plants to accommodate the extra foodstuffs. Shipping has been so bad they have been unable to get the stuff away."

Living in New Zealand.

Mr. McQuade states that the British government has the first call on the foodstuffs in storage, and that prices are regulated by the prices paid by the British government. He says: "If you go to the very best hotels in New Zealand you can live for $3 to $4 a day on the American plan." He says that butter sells for twenty-two cents a pound, while the very best beef can be bought for twenty-five cents a pound. "Goods imported from England and America are the goods for which we have to pay high prices," states Mr. McQuade. "Our own productions are very little above normal prices. We are able to produce all foodstuffs required, and last season was a very good one."

"The country is beginning to feel the great shortage of men, and New Zealanders consider we have done more than our proportion in the war. Including the native Maori population, we have sent over ten per cent. of our entire population, or 110,000 men, overseas. Up to about eighteen months ago the whole of our army of 70,000 men had been raised voluntarily. Since then conscription was adopted and the balance of the army raised by this means."

Mr. McQuade explained the draft system adopted in New Zealand. Men are conscripted between the ages of twenty and forty-five. They have already called up all the single men and the married men without any family. They are now calling up married men with one child, and will shortly call out the next class, married men with two children. "The whole thing has moved smoothly and there has been no trouble at all," he said. He points out that before calling out the married men the single men who had been rejected as unfit were subjected to another medical examination, and where there was any sign that they could be made fit they were put into a special training camp. By this means the country has been able to reclaim 75 per cent. of the men rejected for the front line trenches.

Farmers are Prosperous.

Speaking of the wool production of New Zealand, Mr. McQuade points out that the British government has purchased the entire wool clip of the Dominion, and will continue to do so until one year after the war. "New Zealand is quite prosperous at the present time. The farmers are getting advanced prices and the manufacturers are also reaping their share of the extra work demanded by the war."

The government, which owns the railways, has cut out all special trains for the duration of the war in order to release men for military service, and the fares have been slightly increased. "The license system has been regulated. Hotels, which formerly opened from 6 a. m. until 10 p. m., now open at 9 a. m. and close at 8 p. m. The change has been all for the better," said Mr. McQuade. "There is no excess drinking after people are through with their work." Horse-racing has gone on much as usual during the war. "To show how people can find the money for the sport, at one racing meeting alone in one of the big metropolitan cities in one day they put $400,000 through the totalizers. "People are eating a good deal of fish over there," continued Mr. McQuade. "The fish business is controlled by the municipalities in the cities and they provide fish markets where it is distributed at exceedingly low prices. In fact the price is fixed and cannot be changed."

Speaking generally, Mr. McQuade said that in his opinion it costs about twice as much to live in Canada as it does in New Zealand at the present time. Wages over there were not so high as here, but at the same time they were not low. He pointed out the fact that carpenters earn $4.50 a day and up while a laborer can make $3 and $4 a day.

"The whole country is putting its energies into the war. That is the first consideration," concluded Mr. McQuade.

MAY HAVE SUNK SCORE OF FISHING VESSELS.

The number of fishing vessels destroyed by a German submarine in its raid on the fleet off Georges Banks last Saturday night was nearer a score than the nine already reported, according to men from one of the vessels brought to an Atlantic port, Monday. This is the belief of Andrew St. Croix, mate of the schooner Kate Palmer, who says that from the cross-trees of his vessel he saw the sinking of seven other schooners by bombs and that before the submarine came into view he had counted eleven other explosions at intervals of fifteen minutes or half an hour. Reckoning that one bomb was used for each vessel, St. Croix believes that eleven distant explosions he heard represented the sinking of that many vessels in addition to those he saw go down. The submarine did not use its guns, as far as he observed, though she had two mounted forward and one aft.

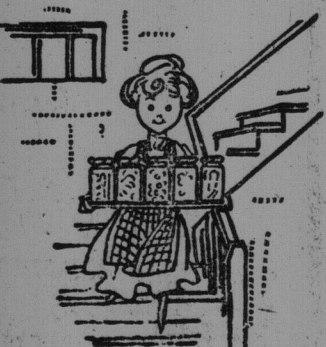

According to the mate, there were from twenty-five to thirty sword fishing vessels operating on the banks, and he believed that the greater number of these were sunk. As each of them carried at least two dory crews, he estimated that at least forty boatloads of men were set adrift on the banks as a result of the raid. St. Croix and his two companions who were brought to an Atlantic port were picked up by a motor boat after they had rowed and sailed about 150 miles. At the time the Kate Palmer was attacked, she was at the extreme southwestern edge of the banks.

As in Canada the United States has decided that re-education and subsequent placement in civil life provided by the Smith-Sears Act for the vocational rehabilitation of disabled persons discharged from the military and naval forces of the United States, will in no wise affect the compensation the men will receive on account of disabilities from the War Risk Insurance Bureau.

War Canning Bulletin

ALL LOADED UP.

Here comes the lady of the house tripping down her cellar stairs loaded up with beets. She has the pleasant anticipation of the winter months when the youngsters will want something appetizing and wholesome in the way of canned products. She knew herself to be a good patriot for canned beets meant "stretching" of meat and the saving of bread during the days when fresh vegetables are not on the market. So she is suitably to herself.

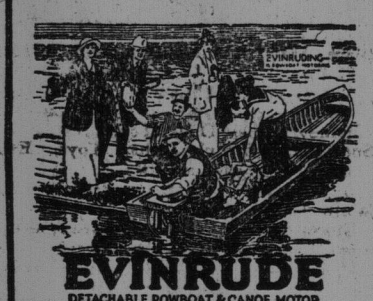

To can beets wash them thoroughly, leaving the roots and one or two inches of stem to prevent loss of color. Blanch ten minutes in water that is kept boiling, or steam if possible. Cold dip and remove the skins, roots and stems. Pack closely in jars. Add one teaspoon salt to each quart jar. Fill the jars with boiling water. Adjust the rubbers and covers. Sterilize one and a half hours.

The vegetable kingdom has the greatest bounty of all to offer to mankind. Although "man shall not live by bread alone," it is an undoubted fact that western civilization would find it difficult to get along without wheat and its products.

The world's total production of wheat approximates 4,000,000,000 bushels a year. It would take 400,000 of the largest freight cars, making a train reaching more than one and a half times around the earth, to move this great annual yield. Moving at twenty miles an hour, this train would take thirty days to pass a given point.

Take Russia, for instance. She has 288,000,000 acres of excellent wheat land. She was the greatest exporter of grain in the world before the war. It is to a great extent because of her defalcation that wheat is so scarce today. It is estimated that only one-third of her crops have been put in this year, while hunger grows apace among her people.
