WANTS CHURCHES TO BANK AND MAKE LOANS

Waterville, Jan. 24—Ralph J. Patterson, superintendent of local street railways, advocated at a Churchmen's Federation banquet here that churches should do a banking and loan business and conduct employment agencies to get in touch with the estimated 30,000,000 people not affiliated with churches in any way or "prospects" as he called them.
 He argued that by practical work of this kind, people could be interested in the more purely religious matters and be induced to lend their support to the churches.

OPERA HOUSE ATTRACTION

The Talker, a Strong Play, Next Week

The Talker, the play which proved so successful when presented by Henry B. Harris in New York last season, will be the bill at the Opera House the first three days of next week. The play is built along big lines and deals with woman in the home. There is no scolding at the idea of the genuine advancement and enlargement of opportunity among women, nor is man scored for the thrift which makes his connection with the business world a success. But the narrow-minded woman, whose principal characteristic is discontentment, though her every care may receive the attention of a faithful husband, and the hair-brained man who thinks all there is to life is to house, feed and clothe his family and pile up the dollars, will find search for sympathy in The Talker a fruitless task.

Mr. and Mrs. Lenox, the principal characters in the play, typify in many ways the average young couple just starting in married life with little upon which to base hopes for the future save industry, good name and good position. A home is purchased on the instalment plan so that the rent will be a permanent investment. All is happiness until the young and vivacious Mrs. Lenox comes under the influence of a feminine being who spends her time preaching about the bondage of womanhood and the duty of her sex to seek freedom, without making any reference to the duties of woman or the added responsibilities that necessarily accompany added liberties. The skimping to pay the instalments becomes irksome to Mrs. Lenox. Just at this time a man who is even more worthy of her friendship comes into her life and he permits her to enjoy many of the things of life which have been denied her.

The wife's affair with this man is brought to a sudden end by the husband who realizes that the Platonic friendship has blossomed into something of a more serious nature. Then the husband's sister falls heir to the wife's idea of freedom to the extent of the shops with the same man, who in the end turns out to have been married. The wife is at once struck with the fact that her follies are about to inflict sufferings upon a younger woman who has taken her talk even more seriously than she did herself. The husband rises to the occasion so that the home is not after all broken up, though little affection remains out of the ruins. The family prospers, however, and the wife has all those things she longed for. Happiness does not return until the sister, broken and degraded, comes back into the home and all three see the error of their ways and go south where a larger business opportunity awaits the husband.
 The Thompson-Woods company produce a splendid production of the play.
