Conversion of a Tree into a Newspaper. In one hundred and forty-five minutes. A very interesting experiment was made on April 17 last at Messrs. Menzel & Company's paper and wood pulp manufactory, at Elmfield, in order to ascertain what was the shortest space of time in which it was possible to convert the wood of a standing tree into paper, and the latter into a journal ready for delivery. This experiment is of extreme importance, because it shows that rapid progress can be attained by the concurrence of practical machines and favorable conditions. Three trees were felled in a forest near the establishment at this five-minute past seven in the presence of two of the owners of the manufactory and a notary whom they had called upon to certify as to the authenticity of the experiment. These trees were carried to the manufactory, where they were cut into pieces 12 inches in length, which were then de-noticed and split. The wood thus prepared was afterwards raised by an elevator to the five debarrers of the works. The wood pulp produced by these machines was then put into a vat, where it was mixed with the necessary materials. This process finished, the liquid pulp was sent to the paper machine. At this four-minute past nine in the morning, the first sheet of paper was finished. The entire manufactory had consumed but one hour and fifty-five minutes.
