JOHN FREDERICKSON'S FUNERAL

The funeral of the late John Frederickson yesterday atternoon was attended by a large crowd of the friends. of this, one of the last of the old shipbuilders who made St. John famous in the old days of the fast sailing trade. Services at his home, 104 Waterlot street, were conducted by Rev. T. J. Deinstadt. Exmouth street Methodist choir and male quartette contributed the music. A long procession followed the body to the grave at Fernhill.

In Exmouth street church last night Rev. Mr. Deinstadt made feeling reference to the loss sustained by the church in the death of one so long and so intimately associated with it. Mr. Frederickson connected himself with Exmouth street Sunday school in 1861, when it met in a building at Marsh bridge. He was elected a trustee of the church in 1869 and remained in that position until his death, always zealous for the church's welfare and wise in her counsels, though inclining rather toward conservative methods. His part in burning the mortgage last year which had hung over the church for forty year a will be vividly remembered by the hundreds present, who saw the trem! ling fingers of the partianch and as the flames ate into it heard him explaim "Thank God that I lived to see this day." sealous for the church's welfare and wise in her counsels, though inclining rather toward conservative methods. TOOK HIS OWN LIFE

Friends of the family and citizens generally learned with regret yesterday that Thomas Hartwell Barker, the eldest son of the late T. Fred Barker, that State of the late T. Fred Barker, had suicided at the home of his mother, Mrs. Arch. Rowan, at 27 Horsfield street.

The young man went home about midnight Saturday and a little later on drank the contents of a bottle of Halloway's Black Art leather dye, a mixture put up by a Chicago firm for converting into black boots all those any other shade. Mrs. Rowan and the other ocupants of the house heard strange sounds coming from young Barker's room and hastened to it. They discovered him vomiting and groaning.

A young son of Mrs. Rowan was despatched for Dr. Scammell, who was promptly on hand. This was about 1 o'clock in the morning.

The young man died about an hour later.

Dr. Scammell found him in a state the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the presbytery, the schools and a number of other build 193 were destroyed.

If has not yet been learned how the farm originate. There was no wind last night, else the entire town would lave been ompletely obliterated. Even as it is the extent of the disaster is very far raching and the financial loss will prot. By reach half a million dollars. There was no loss of life or serious accident. The rapid spread of the configration was due to the triffing water supply and to the fact that St. Pierre has no adequate fire fighting appliances. The town of St. Pierre has been partly burned down three times before—in 1835, 1867 and 1872.
