SIR EDWIN ARNOLD DEAD.

USE AIRSHIPS He Knows Now Whether the Light of Asia is the True Light or Not.

> LONDON, March 24.-Sir Edwin Arnold, the author, died in London

Edwin Arnold, C. S. I., was the second son of Robert Coles Arnold, a magistrate at Sussex, Eng., and was born June 10, 1832. He received his education at King's School, Rochester, and King's College, London, and was elected to a scholarship at University College, Oxford. He graduated with honors in 1854, after which he took up teaching as a profession. He was for a time principal of the government Sansorit College at Poona, in the Bombay Presidency, which office he held during the mutiny and resigned in 1861.

He has contributed largely to litera ture, having published volumes of verses, epic poems, and translations. In 1861, he went on the editorial staff of the London Daily Telegraph, which position he held the rest of his life.

Among his famous publications as "The Light of Asia," an epic poem "Hero and Leander," and a large num
