THE BOND OF SYMPATHY.

American citizens now resident of Dawson will not easily forget the cordial display of sympathy which has been manifested by the Canadians of our city since the death of President McKinley was announced. The dreadful tragedy has affected all classes of people alike. Irrespective of nationality or creed, they have with one consent given expression to condemnations of the murderer and have united in paying their tributes of respect to the dead president.

McKinley's death is justly a matter for international mourning. Not only because a great and good man has suddenly been cut down, but also for the reason that in his death a blow has been struck at legally constituted authority in all countries. A spontaneous outburst of mingled sorrow and indignation has arisen in every quarter of the civilized world and in no place has this been more pronounced than in the city of Dawson. Words of sincerest sympathy have been spoken by everyone from whom an expression of opinion has been sought. The murderer and the class of organized assassins of whom he is a representative, have been bitterly condemned, and the hope expressed that means will be taken to drive them away from the communities which they infest.

Not many months ago the British empire had occasion to mourn the death of Victoria, the great sovereign, who through more than half a century had been England's queen. In that hour of sorrow a wave of sympathy swept over the United States the deep sincerity of which could not be questioned.

Now it is the turn of the United States to mourn and in that mourning, British citizens the world over have claimed a share.

In this community of feeling, another link has been forged in the indissoluble chain which is fast binding the two branches of the race together.

ROOSEVELT'S CABINET.

Some speculation has arisen as to the probable attitude of the new president, Theodore Roosevelt, toward the men who at the present time constitute the cabinet.

In accordance with well established precedent, the various secretaries who have served under President McKinley will undoubtedly tender their resignations. This is the natural course for them to pursue in order to allow the new executive the utmost freedom of action in determining the personnel of his advisers for the balance of the term which he has been so suddenly called upon to fill.

Whether he will ask the present portfolio holders to retain their positions is purely a matter of personal choice with the president. That no immediate changes will be made goes almost without saying. Respect for the late executive, if nothing else, would require that no hasty action be taken.

It is well understood that President Roosevelt has been in close sympathy with the policy of the administration and for that reason it is fair to assume that there will be no wholesale changes in the cabinet.

When Vice President Johnson succeeded to the office of President after the assassination of Lincoln, he retained a number of the cabinet officers despite the fact that his opinions in respect to the great questions then pending settlement, differed materially from those of Lincoln.

William H. Seward acted throughout the Johnson administration as secretary of state as did also Hugh McCulloch in the capacity of secretary of the treasury.

Edwin M. Stanton was succeeded in the office of secretary of war by Gen. Grant, but the secretary of the navy, Gideon Wells, continued to act until the close of the term. The remaining cabinet officers were replaced after a comparatively short time.

When Vice President Arthur succeeded President Garfield on the latter's death he retained Robt. Lincoln as secretary of war. The balance of the cabinet were all replaced within a year or two after Arthur took the oath of office.

There is, therefore, no precedent for President Roosevelt to follow, other than to retain such of the cabinet officers as he deems will best enable him to successfully conduct the affairs of the government.

It will undoubtedly add to the esteem in which Roosevelt is held should he determine to retain the cabinet in its entirety.

The announcement that memorial exercises will be held in Dawson in memory of the late President McKinley will be warmly approved by everyone.

THEY ARE WITH US

Men Who Linger Near Restaurants And Solicit Grub Money.

There are in Dawson at the present time quite a large number of men who hang around the streets in close proximity to restaurants and when a man emerges from one of these establishments looking as though he had just completed a square meal he is almost invariably "struck" for the price of a meal. One gentleman was approached twice within a block yesterday morning and half a dozen or more were solicited last night for "the price." These touchers become students of human nature and realize that when a man has just completed a meal which he has enjoyed he is more kindly disposed than at other times and more apt to dig up in compliance with the stereotyped request.

It would seem, however, that even before pavilion closes is rather early in the season to begin begging operations. The man who expects to beg the price of every meal he eats, during the approaching long, cold winter has not an enviable prospect ahead of him. When begging fails to provide meals, stealing is resorted to and to this class is probably due a number of late petty thefts. It is the duty of every man who is solicited for the price of a meal to call a policeman and give the toucher in charge, as the man who is a vagrant now has no possible show for bettering his condition during the winter; besides there is an institution in town where board and lodging may be honestly earned. That institution is the crown woodpile, and the hobo who took the long chance and came to this country should be familiarized with it.

In the long run it will be a kindness to the vagrant to turn him over to the police for they will eventually get him for stealing or house breaking, in which event he will not be able to move on to the next camp in the glad-some spring time.

POLICY BOB NOT HOP FIEND

Suicide Was Result of Having Spent Money of Nome Eagles.

The statement made last night in an evening paper that Policy Bob, who recently committed suicide in Nome, was a dope fiend and that his death was due to an overdose of the drug contains not one word of truth," said a man who returned from the lower country on the Susie. "I have known Bob for nearly 20 years, and while he possessed nearly every other habit contained in the catalogue it is not true that he smoked 'hop' nor did he use morphine. Nor was his suicide due to him being broke, either. His trouble lay in the fact that he was guilty of a criminal offense, which sooner or later was bound to become known and as he had no money I presume he thought there was no way of squaring matters, so concluded to cash in: Bob was treasurer of the local lodge of Eagles and had charge of the lodge's funds. Some two weeks before his death he became enamored of a dance hall girl named Frankie Young whom he married after a short and thrilling courtship. Immediately afterward he celebrated the event by going on a glorious spree and as gambling was his profession he started out with the idea of winning a 'getaway' stake for himself and bride. Luck was against him and he soon lost all he had. He then took the lodge funds and that quickly went the way of his own cash. He was drinking heavily at the time but was not so drunk that he did not realize what he had done and in a fit of desperation issued some checks on the bank, which were worthless. He secured the cash on them, however, and soon parted with it. Then as a last resort Bob issued some more checks, forging the names of several well known men. These he also lost, and when the night's dissipation was over he awoke to the realization that his criminal dealings were but the matter of a few hours' discovery. He procured a big dose of laudanum and went to a room over a stable retiring about 8 o'clock in the morning, taking the poison as soon as he had gone to bed. All day long until 4 in the afternoon the men employed about the stable heard groans, but not knowing there was anyone upstairs paid but little attention to the noises thinking some of the boys were making them. Shortly before 6 one of the employees having occasion to go upstairs found the victim of his own folly stretched out cold and stiff in death. His body was taken charge of by the Eagles who gave it a decent burial.

There is probably not a gambler west of Chicago who was better known than Policy Bob, and certainly no one of his age had seen more of life's vicissitudes or handled more money than he. Years ago when policy shops were allowed to run in Chicago, his home and native city, Bob had hundreds of them scattered all over the city. He made thousands of dollars every day, spent his money as fast as he made it, was a right hand man of Mike McDonald when that gentleman was the boss broker of Chicago, and 5007 acquired the sobriquet of Policy Bob by which name he has been known ever since.

Policy Bob was the third to commit suicide in Nome within a few months. Just a day or two before his escape a gambler by name of Lawler (not Harry Lawler) suicided by shooting himself. Despondency was given as the cause. Nate Walters, former an employee of the A. E. Co. at Nome also took his own life. On the morning of the fatality he arose at 10 o'clock, placed a revolver in his mouth and pulled the trigger, blowing the top of his head off.

FAREWELL DINNER

To Messrs. Doig and Burpee of Bank of B. N. A.

There was a hot time in the mess rooms over the Bank of B. N. A., Monday night, the occasion being a farewell dinner given by the members of the staff to General Manager Doig and S. A. Burpee, gold teller, who intend leaving for the outside the latter part of the week. The affair was strictly stag in its nature and the display of hearty good fellowship was only equalled by the unlimited quantity of spirits, jovial and otherwise, at hand. During the banquet a number of toasts were proposed and drank standing. Yesterday columns of figures resembled Chinese laundry bills and the most popular air was, "On, what a difference in the morning."

Mr. Burpee's leave-taking will be permanent as he has been transferred to the Vancouver branch of the B. N. A. Mr. Doig is going out to enjoy a well-earned vacation and will be absent all winter, his itinerary including an extensive European tour. During his absence E. O. Minlayson will act as manager of the bank.

A Small Blaze.

A small blaze in the Melbourne hotel last night called out the fire department at 12 o'clock. The fire was caused by a live wire, from which the insulator had become detached, getting into contact with some inflammable material which was immediately set ablaze. The fire was discovered before it had made much progress and the alarm turned in. The department responded quickly and had a string of hose laid in a few minutes but the fire was put out before it became necessary to turn the hose on it.
