

---

The Methods of Mr. Sellyer

---

lar? One-fifty. All right, wrap it up." There was a clink of money on the counter, and the customer was gone. I began to see exactly where professors and college people, who want copies of Epictetus at 18 cents, and sections of "World Reprints of Literature" at twelve cents a section, come in, in the book trade.

"Yes, judge!" said the manager to the next customer, a huge, dignified personage in a wide-awake hat, "sea stories? Certainly. Excellent reading, no doubt, when the brain is overcharged as yours must be.

