

Mr. Joseph Holden's barn

A Hip-roof Barn

The illustrations on this page are those of a hip-roof barn built by Joseph Holden, Park Farm, Oshawa, on the site of one that was burned recently. The barn was designed and built by H. Gay & Sons, of Courville, Ont. It is built of one and two inch lumber throughout and is what is known as a plank-frame—one of the strongest built.

The barn is erected on a stable foundation 36 by 60 feet. It is roofed with the Oshawa 28 gauge galvanized shingles, manufactured by the Pedlar People of that town. The total cost of the barn was $1,300. The whole of the roofing materials, including the shingles, ridge, nails, cavetroughs, conductor pipes, etc., cost $182.

The barn is a very substantial one, and the plans and description herewith will be of assistance to those desiring to erect new barn buildings the coming summer.

The Late Henry Wade

Mr. Henry Wade, who for many years had been prominently identified with live stock association work in Canada, passed away, after a long and painful illness, on Dec. 23rd last. Mr. Wade, who was in his sixtieth year, had for some time past been suffering from diabetes and underwent a critical operation about the end of November with the hope of being greatly benefited thereby. While he seemingly passed through the ordeal very well and his family and friends for a time were hopeful of his ultimate recovery, the strain was too great, resulting eventually in his death.

For many years Mr. Wade was one of the best known figures in live stock circles in Canada. He was born at Port Hope and educated at Victoria University, then located at Cobourg. He was one of the first importers of pure-bred stock into that section of Ontario. In 1882 he came to Toronto as chief executive officer of the Agricultural and Arts Association, a position he held until the disestablishment of that organization on Dec. 31st, 1896. It will be remembered that this association was for many years the only organized department of agriculture in Ontario and issued yearly reports of its work. For fourteen years Mr. Wade edited these reports. After 1896 the registration work of this association was taken directly under the wing of the Department of Agriculture and Mr. Wade made provincial registrar. From that time till two years ago, when the registration offices were moved to Ottawa to complete the scheme of national records, Mr. Wade had his offices in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, where, as registrar of live stock and secretary of a number of live stock and breeders' associations, he came closely in touch with the live stock interests of the country. Among the associations of which he was the chief executive officer for many years are the Canadian Horse Breeders' Association, the Clydesdale, Shire and Hackney Horse Associations, and the Shorthorn, Ayrshire and Hereford Cattle Breeders' Associations. For many years he was registrar for the Swine Breeders' Association. The herd books, stud books and stock records published during these years were edited by Mr. Wade, a work that had much to do with raising the standard and quality of Canadian pure-bred stock. Mr. Wade was a familiar figure at the horse shows of Toronto, and always took a leading part in their management. For several years he had been secretary of the Canadian Horse Show, one of the great horse events of this continent.

He also acted as secretary of the Spring Stallion Show, held in Toronto during February of each year. In many ways, therefore, he was to the front in live stock circles and he will be missed at breeders' meetings and their annual gatherings. He was also identified with agriculture in other ways. It may be news to many to know that in earlier years he had considerable experience in dairying and owned and managed one of the most successful cheese factories in Eastern Ontario. For many years he was a director of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario, and was its president during the year 1896. He was also prominent in the organization and holding of the first Provincial Fat Stock Show, which has since developed into the Provincial Winter Fair.

Mr. Wade was a gentleman of most genial and courteous manner, and his death will be regretted by a large circle of friends. He leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter, Mrs. Geo. E. Macrae, of Toronto. The sons are Mr. Frank Wade, registrar of horses, and Mr. Gerald Wade, registrar of Shorthorns, under the National Record Board, at Ottawa, Mr. Wm. N. Wade, manager, Crown Bank, Burford, and Mr. Thos. K. Wade, Toronto. He was buried at Port Hope on Christmas day.
