support. The doctor did not take her hands, though his words were inexpressibly tender in tone.

"You must bear bravely still the trial of this brother's life," he said. "But you must be true to others as well. You must be true to Rob. If you or he still have any doubt as to your duty or your absolute freedom, why, I understand"—the doctor smiled—"that the fact that the marriage was a farce is so admitted and set down in black and white in a paper which James Turbine obtained and secured, and gave me to hand to Rob. I have it safe. But I shall see that Captain Turbine gives it to the joyful Rob, himself; for I fancy that he took heroic measures to obtain it."

"Jim!"

When they were in stress of thought, or had nothing else to say, they put the burden of speech off on to that easy-spoken, brief name—they just said "Jim."

"For no other woman,"—the tender smile on the doctor's face grew whimsical—"could I have returned that fine young rascal so quickly to his inheritance. With you, I am not afraid. He did well for himself, indeed, when he won your heart. He will be here soon. You are very sweet to-night, and beautiful, troubled, glad, helpful, soft, and young. You would rive the heart of any man—who loved you. Do not tease Rob. Your eyes melt the soul of a man, and bewilder him—any man who loved you. And as for Rob, they say he worships you."

He did not turn to her again. "I am going to my good friend Mrs. Byjo," he said. "When I see you again you and Rob must have your plans made, or I shall have to carry you both away by force."

Mrs. Byjo, her evening work done, was waiting for her "boarder."

"Well," said the doctor cheerfully, in straightforward Power Lot, God Help Us, fashion, "Mary and Rob are going away with me, to be married. They will have the means to live in royal style, my good friend. Captain James Turbine will be marrying Cuby and roaming away with her."

Mrs. Byjo suddenly sprang forward and kissed the gentle though distinguished gentleman. Her spectacles were scattered with the impetuosity of the impact, and she searched for them without embarrassment, and with joyful tears in her eyes, the doctor aiding her.

"I thank you for that mark of your approval—and condescension, Mrs. Stafford," he said very gravely; and added gently, "I hold that kiss as sacred."

"If I was young and handsome and rich, which I never was," said Mrs. Byjo, settling her restored glasses on her pathetic little snub nose, "you'd seem like a brother to me; for being of the family I am, and not knowing yours, I don't know as I could consider any closer tie; but the poor old woman couldn't help giving ye a smack."

"I shall never forget that I have a royal sister," replied the doctor, "who has given me a token of esteem which I hold forever sacred."

A gentleman met his medical adviser on Forty-second street the other day and passed a friendly greeting. "Well, and how are you?" asked the doctor.

"Quite passable, thanks," said the other, "but I notice that when I bend my body forward, stretch out my arms horizontally, and impart to them a circular motion, I always feel such a pain in my left shoulder."

"But what need is there for you to perform such ridiculous antics?" inquired the physician.

"Do you know any other way, doctor, of getting on your topcoat?" replied his patient.
