"What is it it demanded half-a-dozen voices, frustleally.

"Der docks burrows in the earth,' said be.

"So does a fox, a rabbit, and a marmot; but not one of them see half the size of Der dochs.'

"What does he sat I" said I, commencing another train of inquiry.

"Roots!" vociferated one.

"Game! shouted another,

"The bark of trees and fruits,' said a third.

"He pesters fish, the entrails of poultry, or garbage of any sort,' chimed in the landlord.

"At this last observation, a sickening sensation crept over me," said Dick Squedder. "I began to support that the oily-looking old burgomaster, lor the sake of the miserable florin my dinner came to, had allowed me to cram myself with a polecat, an otter, or a gigantic weasle. My head began to swim; my dinner rose and fell in my stomach, like the patons of a steam engine; for, with my anxiety to discover what I had eaten, the noise, the sour wine and the amoke, I was lieguning to suffer all the miseries of a fit of indignation.

"Luckily for the security of my dinner, Capt.
Herr You Knoblesdorf (he deserves to be immortalized for settling the matter) suggested at this moment, that if the animal's color was accurately described. I might perhaps discover on what I had dined. Here, at first, there was as wide an opinion as ever, for 'Der dacha,' chameleon-like,
was brown or brownish, grey or greyish, or pepper and saltish, according to the notions of the disputants. However, it was a step in the right direction, for, as they discussed the colors of my gentleman's cost, the muddle-beaded burgomaster recollected, for the first time, that he had preserved
his skin, and he abused himself almost as stuch
as I did for not himking of that before.

The following sensible observations on the Clargy Reserve question, are from the Brockville Statemen, Mr. Gewan's paper;—

Two questions will arise out of this Despatch; lit. Shall the recents of these Reserves be held speed for religious purposes? 2nd. Shall they be devoted to purposes at education?

The Loury Canadians are in favor of the first proposal, well knowing that if these Reserves are taken away, the immense possessions of their own Church must apseality follow; the Church seems to court their opposition? The Upper Canadians—that is, all the Radicals, and a considerable portion of others—will favor their being devoted to purposes of general education. We go for maintaining them for religious purposes, and if such sessiots as the Church are kicked overboard, and the issue put fairly before the country, if such nestots as the Church are kicked over-board, and the issue put fairly before the country, we have no doubt as to the result. All Christian Bodies, Roman Catholic as well as Protestant, are in favor of religious education; and if a fair and equitable division should be made, according to numbers, such Church can support its own Min-isters, or educate its own people, or otherwise apply its proportion, as may best suit their own principles and their own wishes.

resting account of a new discovery in Photo aphy, made by a gentleman named Hill, residing n the State of New York; Mr. Hill is a Clergyman, obliged to retire from active duties by reason of ill-health, and has amused himself with experi ments in this beautiful art to occupy his time. The discovery is a truly wonderful one, for it is neither more nor less than the transfer of the actual colors of nature to the prepared plate. We quote the following passages from a short treatise which he has published:—

" My wife and myself alone," says he, "know the process, and not a scrap or item shall ever be communicated until I am made perfectly sure of a suitable compensation." All that he has divulged is, that the mystery is dependent on a new and "singular compound" which he, one day, anexpectedly, found to be the grand areanum, of which he had been in quest. Of this he gives the following account:—

"The compound above referred to it to me, the interesting of the interes unicated until I am made perfectly sure

"The compound above referred to is to me a nondescript, though I have made the acience of chemistry my study for years. That it is a new substance, or combination of substances, I am positive; and this is all I know concerning it. It is simply and easily produced, but not by any law stated in the large number of chemical works with which I am familiar. Doubtless, however, a correct and thorough analysis will determine its nature."

Mr. Hill had forty-five specimens of the Hillotype, of the character of which some idea may be formed iom his description, which we quote, as follows:

" 1. A view, containing a red house, green grass and foliage, the wood color of the trees, several cows of different shades of red and brindle, colored garments on a clothes-line, blue sky and the faint blue of the atmosphere, intervening between the camera and the distant mountains, very delicately spread over the picture as it by the hands of fairs artist.

"2. A sunset scene, in which the play of colors upon the clouds is impressed with a truthfuluesa and gorgeous beauty which I cannot describe.

"3. Several portraits, in which I have the true complexion of the skin, the rosy cheeks and lips. blue and hazel eyes, auburn, brown, and sandy hair, and every color of the drapery. Changeable silk is given in all its fine blendings of colors, and delicate richness of hues. I not only not red. able silk is given in all its ane blendings of colors, and delicate richness of hues. I not only get red. blue, orange, violet, &c., but their various tints. The whole impression, including the lights and shades, is far more brilliant, round, and mellow. than the most superb daguerrean image I have ever seen.

He adds:—
"I have a most exquisite type of my little girl, (one year old,) taken in the act of crying, the plate not having been exposed a full second. At the same time, my light required fifteen seconds for a daguerrotype. This picture has caught the expression perfectly, both of the eye and whole face.
On one cheek is seen a bright tear drop, and the color showing through it much deeper than the surrounding parts; which latter, I suppose, is owing to the refractive action of the fluid."
