TWO OFFICERS
LOST LIVES

Two Popular Michigan Men Were Drowned at Detroit Last Evening.

Brave to the End—One Clung to the Boat and was Saved—Distressing Fatality.

Detroit, April 4.—The icy water of Detroit river last evening claimed as its victims two of the most popular officers of the Fourteenth United States Infantry, men who escaped death on the battlefields of their country and had lived to be honored; men who had faced the hail of lead and storm of shot while fighting in far-off Cuba and the Philippines, but came away unscathed, only to lose their lives by drowning.

Sorrow and grief are everywhere in Detroit this morning, and although the life work of these stationed there is one of war and death and carnage, the shock of the sudden taking away of two of the officers of the fort threw a shadow over the post which will remain for many a day. First Lieut. Howard S. Avery, Italian adjutant, and Second Lieut. Wm. Ashbridge, were lost shortly before 7 o'clock last evening, while returning from a fishing trip in the vicinity of the Solway Process Co. and Zug Island. They were accompanied by Trumpeter Richard P. Tunney, who escaped by clinging to the overturned boat until he could be rescued. The three soldiers left Fort Wayne about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, as has been their habit for the last few weeks on a fishing expedition out in the river below the fort. No attention was paid them until about 6 o'clock several employees of the Solway Process Co. noticed the erratic actions of the small boat containing the men. The sail was hoisted and a slight wind blowing. The two lieutenants were rowing to aid the speed of the boat, but those ashore said that the boat was making indifferent headway and that those in the skiff apparently were heading for no place in particular. This attracted the attention of Oliver Dan McCloud, and Foreman of Apparatus William L. Symons, in the tower of the Solway plant.

PUFF—AN UPSET.

While they were watching the boat a sudden puff of wind struck the sail and the boat was overturned. The three soldiers were thrown into the water, and their cries for help could be heard in the tower, nearly a quarter mile away.

Foreman Symons, unable to leave the plant, ordered Henry Henning, of the dock repair gang, to man a boat and go to the assistance of the drowning men, whose cries were getting weaker and weaker. For twenty minutes Symons says he could hear the cries of the three men, and then it settled down to one man.

When Henning arrived at the overturned boat Trumpeter Tunney was the only person in sight. Tunney is an exceedingly heavy man and Henning had all he could do to handle him. Upon getting the trumpeter, now unconscious and almost stiff with the cold, into the boat, Henning started for the shore, where Tunney was turned over to Dr. Carey, of Delray, and later taken to the hospital at Fort Wayne.

Lieuts. Avery and Ashbridge were considered to be good swimmers, but Tunney could not swim a stroke. The drowning of the two officers and the rescue of the trumpeter under these circumstances are extraordinary, but the wandering tale of Tunney while in the hospital last evening gave an inkling of the true condition of affairs on the river after the accident.

BRAVE TO THEIR LAST BREATHS.

In his last interview, Tunney said that when the boat went overboard, Avery and Lieut. Ashbridge yelled to him to cling to the boat and kick for the shore. The little craft was not sufficiently buoyant to support the three men, so apparently the two swimmers gave the support over to the man who could not swim at all.

The last seen of Avery or Ashbridge was when the boat went over. Tunney remembers that they called to him to hang fast and kick, but that is all. A whole company of men from the fort were sent out in searching parties, but at 3 o'clock this morning nothing had been found of the two officers. There is not one chance in a thousand that they will be found alive, but every effort will be made to locate the bodies as soon as possible.

RETURNS FROM REFERENDUM

Manitoba's Majority Against Prohibition is Over Six Thousand.

Premier Roblin's View of the Matter—Will not Touch Prohibition for a While.

Winnipeg, Man., April 3.—The latest referendum returns show a total vote in favor of the liquor act of 10,621, and against of 16,600. In Winnipeg city the ballot stood 2,450 for and 5,817 against. The consensus of opinion seems to be that prohibition for the present is removed from politics, and that no political party will re-introduce it for many a year. The license holders feel well repaid for their arduous campaign work. They acted very calmly last night, and did not grow excessively jubilant over their victory. The saloons and bars were tightly locked up, even after the polls had closed. There was nothing doing at prohibition headquarters, and the few faithful that gathered there were much disappointed, especially as regards Winnipeg. The temperance leaders received the result in silence, and will not express an opinion on the matter. They are strictly non-committal.

Mr. Mulock, chairman of the Dominion Alliance, said he would prepare a statement for this afternoon, but nothing else could be got from him. At the Prohibition League Committee's headquarters about the same state of affairs existed. Mr. Taylor refused to talk on the vote itself, but he condemned the manner in which it was taken. In many polls the prohibition scrutineers were kept from assuming their duties for some time by substitutes, who got there ahead of them, presumably appointed by the liquor men, and during that time, Mr. Taylor said, the liquor men had "got in some of their fine work."

In an interview on the result of the vote, Rev. Dr. Duval, of Knox Church, said the Alliance expected something of the kind, but if the government wished to aid the cause of prohibition on the result of this referendum it must remember that a day of judgment is coming.

Rev. Jos. Hogg, of St. Andrew's, said it was neither a surprise nor a disappointment to him. "I would rather," he said, "have the act defeated than left to the enforcement of either of the present political parties. Now that it is defeated, we must see that we put men into office that will be true to their pledges to the people, men who will have the moral courage to enforce a law that the people demand."

Premier Roblin said the result of the vote would have a great effect in Ontario, and would help Premier Ross out considerably. Attorney-General Campbell would not yet express an opinion. He wants to size up the situation after all the returns are in, and he has time to consider things.

LATER RETURNS.

Winnipeg, Man., April 3.—Further returns of voting on the liquor act referendum received to-day increase the total vote to about 30,000, with many of the distant rural municipalities to be heard from. The unreported places are expected to split about even, leaving a straight majority of about 6,000 against the enforcement of the act. The total so far received is: In favor, 17,461; against, 11,137—majority against, 6,327.

The official returns for Winnipeg, received by Returning Officer Hubbard, are: Negative, 5,817; affirmative, 2,451—majority against, 3,366.
