A DOUBTING HEART.

Where are the swallows fied?
Prozen and dead,
Perchance upon some bleak and stormy shore.
O, doubting heart!
Far over purple seas,
They wait, in sunny ease,
The balmy southern breeze,
To bring them to their northern homes once more.

Why must the flowers die? Prisoned they lie In the cold tomb, heedless of tears

They only sleep below,
The soft white ermine snow,
While winter winds shall blow,
To breathe and smile upon you soon

The sun has hid its rays
These many days;
Will dreary hours never leave the earth?
O, doubting heart!
The stormy clouds on high
Veil the same sunny sky,
That soon (for spring is nigh)
Shall wake the summer into golden

Fair hope is dead, and light Is quenched in night, What sound can break the silence despair?
O, doubting heart!

Thy sky is overcast, Yet stars shall rise at last, Brighter for darkness past, And angels' silver voices stir the air —Adelaide Anne Proctor.

DUCKED A MORMON

And Another was Thumped by 300 Hungarians.

Salt Lake Missionaries Received Fough Treatment From an Audience in South Hungray.

Vienna, Dec. 1.—Advices received from Temesvar, South Hungary, re-port that two mormon emissaries from Salt Lake City, Utah, were delivering lectures there when the and once lectures there, when the audience stormed the platform and ejected the pair. One of them was compelled to run the gauntiet of 300 trate citizens armed with sticks, straps or knotted cords and shod with hobnailed shoes. He was afterwards stripped to the waist and thrashed by a dozen matrons of Temesvar. The second mormon was ducked in a horse pond. Finally the two elders were rescued by the police. The minister of the in-terior has prohibited further mormon attempts to proselyte, as being a danger to the well-being of the state

Wealthy Miss Berger Lost Her Reason by Coloring Her Hair.

At Least Her Sisters Made That Charge in a Brooklyn Court.

klyn, Dec. 1. - Miss Victoria Berger, the wealthy and eccentric spinster of No. 4 South Oxford street whose home is filled with rugs and curios, has appeared on the witness stand to protest against the proceedings taken by her sisters to have her declared insane.

These ladies say that because of her mental condition, which they ascribe to the use of hair dye, her estate, which was worth $300,000 l5 years ago, has dwindled to $30,000, and that thou-sands of dollars' worth of jewelry and furniture, consisting of rare curios gathered in all parts of the world, ave been taken from her home on chattel mortgage. Part of this property has been sold, they say, and their lawyer has held up the proceeds by injunction. The rest of it they have not been able to find.

een able to find.
Miss Berger said she had been swindled by men in real estate transactions.

"I had 20 desks, which were taken from me under a chattel mortgage," she said. "They were inlaid, and were valuable. The drapery of one window valuable. The drapery of one window which yas taken was worth $500." Other property taken under the chattel mortgage consisted of two cashmere rugs, which were worth $10,000; lace worth $5,000, clothing and diamonds and other jewelry."

"Were you once known as the belle of Brooklyn?" Miss Berger smiled as she answered: "That was when I was in society."

in society."
"You have a good musical education?"

"I once sang for people; now I sing only for the glory of God."

Mrs. Barre testified that she loved Mrs. Barre testified that she loved her sister dearly. Bhe said she had been in Miss Berger's home. "There were 500 rugs in the house," she added. "They were six deep on the floor. They were pinned to the walls and were everywhere. One rug she had there was worth $800. She had $10,000 worth of jewelry.

"The change in my sister began when she started to use stuff for her hair. She became eccentric after that. She is 40 years old."

The jury handed in a sealed verdict.

A PRAYER.

Breathe on me, breath of God,
Fill me with life anew,
That I may love what thou dost love
And do what thou wouldst do. Breathe on me, breath of God, Until my heart is pure; Until with thee I will one will, Breathe on me, breath of God, Till I am wholly thine, Till all this earthly part of me Glows with thy fire divine.

Breathe on me, breath of God,
So shall I never die,
But live with thee the perfect life
Of thine eternity.

THE ITCH TO WRITE

Property Delaced by Idle Polk With Ready

"The owner of some property be-tween Merstham and Redhill has hit upon an ingenious idea of saving one of his white gates on the public road from the disfigurement of pencilers. At the side of this gate he has set up a board which bears the pathetic inscription: 'Please write on this board instead of on the gate,' and marvelous to tell, the irritating penciler has compiled with this polite request," says the London Globe. "Unless other owners of property follow this exam-ple, we fear that walls and gates will continue to be scratched and scrib-bled over by these unfortunate beings possessed with the 'cacoethes scribendi.' Few manias appear to be strong-The cockney never goes into a wood but he cuts his initials on a tree, or to the seaside but he joins bis in-amorita's name with a true lover's knot to his own on the side of the white cliffs. The whole world seems to be scribbled over. Where there is a wall in the country, children armed with a piece of schoolmaster's chalk use it as a foundation for bitter accusations against each other. 'Mary Jones's father drinks,' is written on one Surrey wall, and on some new palings erected around a park an urchin has scribbled of the owner, 'C- is greedy. But the greatest piece of vandalism is to be seen in Shakespeare's house at Stratford. There on the window of the room in which the bard is supposed to have been born. Sir Walter Scott once wrote his immortal name with a diamond. The signature is now difficult to distinguish some utter nonentity has written his own name straight across Scott's."

Wove Her Life in House of Beads It's probably one of the most wonderful houses in existence. It stands two feet high and its firs' floor measures about ten inches square. second floor has all around it the queerest little balconies, inclosed with fences. A mansard roof, through which curious little dormer windows peep, covers the third floor. It is made entirely of beads. Pure white beads form its windows, beads of chalk form its sides, the roof is of opal tinte' glass. A woman worked fifty years upon it, weaving into it the story of her life. She called it the "Castle of Liberty."

The maker was an eccentric woman of Cheltenham, Pa., Miss Matilda Hemming, whose picture is shown with the house. When she was eighteen her heart fell into the keeping of a young man of goodly appearance, but who her father thought was not of goodly ways. The daughter was told that she must choose between her father and her lover.

It was then that Miss Matilda began her "Castle of Leverty," as she called the "little bead house," And into it with every bead she put some longing and hope for her first love-some vain hope that time might change, as it is supposed to do, all things, and she would "live happily ever after."

Fifteen years passed, and the structure of the "Castle of Liberty" grew. First the sides were made on perforated cardboard with chalk beads no larger than a pin head-still the lover stayed away. Ten years later the windows of the first floor and the foundation of the second were finished. Miss Matiida was growing old, her hair, once dark and glossy, was almost white. The love of her youth had married another, and she learned that life does not pass according to her plan. So she worked to perfect the "Castle of Lib-

About five years ago she was found dead in a chair with her "Castle of Liberty" on a table before her.

What there is to choose between the civilization of China and of Russia is on the side of the former. A Chinese mob may have murdered the western envoys, but the Russian government, within a few years, has harried the whole Hebrew race in Rasia, with accompaniments of blood and violence that would have justified European in tervention on the principles by which our intervention in Cuba was defended. Her treatment of the Stundists has been one of the atrocities of the cantury. If China breaks treaties, the cannot exceed Russia in betrayals of public faith, as witness every engagement she has made with foreign ua-tions since 1856. Russia's recent treatment of Finland smells to heaven. Whatever the complications in China, we hope that the United States will be delivered from the infamy of fight-
