Book Notices.

The North American Review for September is an admirably constituted number. Whether we regard the timeliness or the interest of the articles, or the literary competence of the authors shown for their discussion, "First comes," "State Regulation of Corporate Profits," by Chief Justice Jackson, is a most important article, by wise legislation and applying the spirit of enlightened jurisprudence and principles of the common law, the individual and collective economic conditions and monopolies in general may be restricted and the interests of the people sufficiently considered. John A. Macdonald's "Speeches on Protection" offers suggestions on the statement of the policy of misgovernment in our great municipalities that will command the earnest interest of all good citizens without exception.

"Class Distinctions in the United States," a subject that is destined to occupy more and more the attention of the American people, is a great interest.

"Slavery at Sea" is the subject of some pertinent reflections by James Jackson, Chief Justice of the State of Georgia.

In "The Case of Webster and the Boston Boys," the views propounded by political managers in large cities. The well-known English essayist, W. H. Mallock, contributes "Caste and Solitude," in which he deals with much ingenuity the arguments adverse to popular government. "The Rev. Dr. St. John" contains an article on "Distinctions of Education." Finally, "Great Men, the most charming of all living writers on natural history, disquisitions on an animal, Wild Life," published at 30 Larchmont Place, New York, and for sale by book sellers generally.

The parties who are promoting the medical school for women in Toronto have met with so much encouragement that they have decided on a permanent building to be erected in the city.

A late meeting of lumbermen is now going on from the Ottawa district to the United States.

A strange kind of theft has been inaugurated in the city of Guelph, at the Victoria Market in pairs during the day. The thief steals a pocketbook, presumably for the hair, which is valuable for studying upholstering.
