How will it Affect Business.

The above is a question that is frequently asked in reference to the Temperance or Scott Act. It is one of the bugsaboo dangled by the whiskey men before the eyes of men who are not by any means temperance men, at least what is usually termed a temperance man. But these men are given to solve business problems in a business manner, and the result is that the Baker says that "if the man who spends the dollar in whiskey that should be used in buying bread to feed his children were prevented from buying whiskey, he (the baker) would then get the trade that belonged to him, and the children the bread."

The Butcher says that were whiskey done away with he would be selling joints of meat to families that today have to content with potatoes and point, (point the potato at a bene that has perhaps served a week's dinner.)

The Shoemaker says that were it not for whiskey he would do a much larger trade in women's and children's boots and shoes.

The Grocer says that were whiskey done away with, tea would be used as a substitute by the whiskey drinkers themselves, and of course along with tea would go sugar, and all the other concomitants that go to make an enjoyable meal.

The Tailor says that no whiskey could mean to his trade no rags, consequently more clothing.

The Furniture man says no whiskey more weddings. The man who is now content to put up with the side of a plank, would then begin to think he wanted something better and would buy beds and bedding.

The Barber says that the fellow who goes now with his face like a blacking brush, because he wants his cents for his whiskey, will want a clean face for Sunday. And so these men figure it, and who says they are not right in their calculations.

The only ones who seem to really imagine, with good cause, it will hurt their business, are whiskey sellers themselves.

The Constables say it will hurt their business, as only one half the number will be required that is required now.

The Doctors say it will hurt their business, (unless they go into the prescription business largely, and that they hold is dangerous) as it will do away with a fruitful source of disease.

The Undertaker and the grave-digger says it will affect their business, as whiskey furnishes them with one quarter of all business they do.

This is how it will affect business. Canadian electors, how do you like it? Whose business do you want to help, the butcher's, the baker's, the grocer's, the shoemaker's, tailor's, furniture dealer's, hardware man, &c., or the hotel-keepers, the undertaker's, the grave-digger's, the constable's, &c. Which?—[South Simcoe Battle Axe.

Causes of Poverty.

The reasons why the poor are always with us it might be worth while to inquire into much more carefully and systematically than has yet been done. In general the causes of poverty in the United States at least are susceptible of being determined, yet there is in fact very little definite knowledge on this important subject. The executive committee of the Associated Charities of Boston have been at the trouble of collecting the statistics in regard to the same brought under their notice. These they have given to the public in an elaborate report. For the principal causes are given, which cover all but a very small percentage of the total number of instances brought under the society's notice. They are intemperance, ignorance, laziness and pride.

Hopeful Words.

Mrs. McArthur, of Hepeville, Ont., says she couldn't keep house without Hagar's Pectoral Balm to cure prevailing throat and lung troubles.

How a Woman Puts on Shoes.

When a woman has a new pair of shoes sent home she performs altogether different from a man. She never shoves her toes into them and yanks and yanks until she is red in the face and all out of breath, and then she starts stamping and kicking around, but pulls them on part way very carefully, twitches them off again to take a last look and see if she has got the right one, puts them on again, looks at them dreamily, says they are just right, then takes another look, stops suddenly to smooth out the wrinkles, twists around and surveys them sideways, exclaims: "Mercy! how loose they are!" looks at them again square in front, works her feet around so they won't hurt her quite so much, takes them off, looks at the heels, to the bottom, and then inside, puts them on again, walks up and down the room once or twice, remarks to her better half that she won't have them at any price, tilts down the mirror so that she can see how they look, turns in every possible direction, and nearly indicates her neck trying to see how they look from that way, looks off, steps up again, takes thirty or forty farewells looks, says they make her feet look awful big, and will never do in the world, puts them off and on three or four times more, asks her husband what he thinks about it and pays no attention to what he says, goes through it all again, and finally says she will take them. It is a very simple matter indeed.

An Editor's Tribute.

Mr. P. Keator, editor of Ft. W. says: "For the past five years I have always used Dr. King's New Discovery for coughs of most severe character, as well as for those of mild character. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in some high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough, cold, etc. Call at Wilson's Store and get a Free Trial Bottle, size $1.00." (2)

How to Make a Garden.

A paper on the "Fertilization of Flowers," read before the Albany Institute, by Chas. H. Peck, the State Botanist, was listened to with general interest. The lecturer was concise, clear and comprehensive. The fertilization of flowers, he said, consists in the application of the proper pollen to their stigmas and the consequent transfer of the pollen contents to the young seed case or ovule. It involves two processes: first, the transportation of the pollen from the anthers, where it is produced, to the stigma and transfer of the pollen contents, by means of the growing pollen tube to the ovules, which otherwise would not develop and form seeds. The first process is accomplished by various agents, but especially by winds and insects. The former carry most of the pollen of grasses and cereals and of many of our forest trees, and generally of such plants as have small, inconspicuous flowers with numerous anthers and abundance of pollen. The latter carry the pollen of those flowers that are highly colored or fragrant and that secrete nectar, which with pollen is the natural food of many insects and the bait that allures them to the reward the insect offers for their services.

There are two kinds of fertilization: self-fertilization, in which the same plant produces both the pollen and the stigma to which it is applied, and cross-fertilization, on which the two are produced on different plants of the same species. The latter, as a rule, is much better for the progeny of the plant than the former, and there are many special and curious structural contrivances in flowers by which it is favored and secured even in cases where both pollen and stigma are produced in one and the same flower. Even many floral structures, which at first sight appear admirably adapted to secure self-fertilization, are found by closer investigation to be ingenious arrangements for insuring cross-fertilization. Examples of these various structures were noticed and illustrated by diagrams. Yet notwithstanding the evident designs in so many instances to bring about self-fertilization, self-fertilization is in many flowers allowed to and in some clearly designed, as if nature was intent on the preservation of the species through the agency of the seed produced even by the latter method if through any mishap the former should fail. In many flowers there are special structures calculated to favor the visits of certain kinds of insects which are good pollen carriers, and to exclude those that are small or wingless and therefore poor pollen-carriers.

A knowledge of this subject adds much to the interest with which we study flowers and gives to their endless variation in structure, form, color and appendages a meaning and a significance which they would not otherwise have. It enables us to explain many phenomena in variation, fruitage and sterility which would otherwise be inexplicable. It gives to the horticulturist and the florist power to secure and render permanent and desirable variety of his cultivated plants, to improve poor or undesirable varieties and even to originate new varieties by resorting to a judicious system of fertilization. It is also necessary for those who raise plant seeds for sale; for either ignorance or neglect of its laws and requirements will be likely to result in a failure of the variety to "come true to seed" and will occasion sore disappointment if not a pecuniary loss. Finally, a knowledge of this subject is almost sure to lead the thoughts from the contemplation of the striking evidences of design which it displays to the designer, and to cause us to see these minute objects that there is a God in Nature.—[Albany Evening Journal.

WASHINGTON, D.C.,
May 15th, 1886.
GENTLEMEN—Having been a sufferer for a long time from nervous prostration and general debility, I was advised to try Hop Bitters. I have taken one bottle, and I have been rapidly getting better ever since, and I think it the best medicine I ever used. I am now gaining strength and appetite, which was all gone, and I was in despair until I tried your Bitters. I am now well, able to go about and do my own work. Before taking it I was completely prostrated.
Mrs. MARY STUART.

James Brayley, Hamilton, says: "I read the testimonials for McGregor's Speedy Cure and found I had a case of the same. I got a bottle and it helped me right away. I was as bad with Bilious Fever and Indigestion as I think any one could be. I have taken three bottles and am nearly well and can eat any kind of food without it hurting me. I may say I am better than I ever expected to be. Free trial bottles at G. Erynias."

In the history of medicines no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by J. Wilson.

A REWARD—Of one dozen "TEABERRY" to any one sending the best four line rhyme on "TEABERRY," the remarkable little gem for the Teeth and Gums. Ask your druggist for address.

Thousands say So.
