

England's Annual Football Madness
Big Football Association Has Over Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand Members and Twenty Thousand Referees.

London, Oct. 12.—Just as baseball, the national game of America, is drawing to a finish, association football, the great winter game of England, enters its early stages. Within a few weeks it will be in full cry, and throughout the length and breadth of John Bull's island, in every lot and field in every nook and corner, in every home and school, boys and men and women, to a number closely approaching the total population of the country, will be football mad. Baseball fever is a mild and harmless disease compared with the football mania of the British.

It will be seen, then, that playing professional football in England is not as lucrative a job as playing professional baseball in the United States. The £5,000 a year which the best footballers receive compares poorly with the sum running to twice that amount that is paid to the stars of the baseball diamond. A footballer works nine months out of the year, from August to April, so that he has but three remaining months in which to supplement his "meagre" wage. A football player works but six out of the twelve for his much faster envelope.

The buying and selling of players is as keen in this country as in the United States, although in that respect the scale of prices is lower. Simpson, one of the best players in the game, was last year bought by the Blackburn Rovers in competition with the other clubs of the Football League for the unprecedented price of £10,000.

Remarkable Support. Professional football here gets a support from the spectator public that is truly remarkable. Talk about your baseball crowds in the United States! The biggest of them would bring grief to the backers of the great empire clubs. You who have marvelled at the thousands that have backed the benches of the Polo Grounds or Forbes Field, should gaze on the two-capped legions of Crystal Palace on Cup Day. That is the day when the rivalry match of the season, by which, according to the arrangement of the Football League schedule, the championship is decided, is played. More than 110,000 people have pushed and packed and squirmed their way into the grounds to witness the struggle—more people than you could put in three arenas like the Polo Grounds and a modern baseball stadium, and probably the astute business men who are running baseball in the United States are infinitely better off than those who are behind professional football in England.

Cup Day is one of the most astonishing observances in the English year. It is well worth seeing from beginning to end by anyone interested in the customs of the people. It is the one great event of the year which has a national appeal. Men and boys, girls and women all over the country, even in the lowliest walks of life, save their money months before hand to enable them to witness the struggle—their money months before hand to enable them to witness the struggle—their money months before hand to enable them to witness the struggle.

Over these big league clubs as well as over the smaller professional and amateur organizations, rules of the Football Association, of which the King is patron and Lord Kinnaird is president. The association, I am afraid, is not happy in its dual role of ruler of professional as well as amateur sport. Although the big leagues are tongue-tied to the governing body, there are many signs that they would like to break away and form a professional association of their own, which would have frequent misunderstandings with the association, and because of their great importance, have generally managed to have their way.

Salaries of Players. One of the most serious bones of contention during recent years has been the salaries of the players. The rules of the Football Association provide that no player in any club affiliated with the organization should be paid more than $20 a week or $1,040 a year. In order to see that this rule, as well as others, was faithfully observed, the Football Association claimed the right to inspect the books of every club wherever it wishes and to have submitted to it a detailed balance sheet at the end of every year. The Football Association cannot talk as much as it wants, but the fact remains that this salary rule has been consistently broken in hundreds of instances throughout England. It is safe to say that there is not a desirable player in the whole country who is receiving so little as the maximum salary allowed by the rules of the association. For some years it has been known that those on the inside that $100 a week is the salary demanded by the best players.

These illegal salaries were concealed by making false returns to the Football Association. The books were kept regular by a system of cheating the turnstiles at the admission gates. A large part of the money taken in at the gate was thus unrecorded and went to the fund for the payment of the unlawful salaries. A year ago the Football Association attempted to ease its conscience, a little. It could not have been ignorant of matters known to everybody else connected with the game. So the rule fixing a maximum salary was dropped, and the matter left to the individual clubs. Now many of the clubs provide that players shall receive in addition to their regular salaries, bonuses for winning games, for winning championships and for various other reasons, but that by no means done away with the secret salaries.

LAZY MEN GIVEN SHORT SHRIFF IN THIS TOWN

Society of "Make 'em Work" Evolves Effective Means of Dealing With Labor-Hating Vagrants—Offenders are Spanked.
Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 12.—A secret organization that visits swift punishment upon the lazy and shiftless, providing dire penalties for those young men within its jurisdiction who refuse to work, has been unearthed in the little town of Chelsea, recently annexed to Kansas City, Kas.

The organization, known as the "Make 'em Work" society, has a membership of 25, wields a powerful influence in the social and industrial life of the town of Chelsea. No young man who is steadily forward of ten years of age is allowed to be out of the house unless he is possessed of the dread disease, laziness, so incubated with the worm, or in plain and unembroidered English, is lazy and no account. For him there is a special white card administered to that portion of him which is uppermost—as he sprawls face downward over a huge log in the "courtroom."

In all time and in all climes there has been secret organizations for the administration of stern justice—unhindered by writ of habeas corpus or mandamus, by injunction or bigamy—p—p—and for the protection of society. These have been brought into being by dire necessity. Of such have been the Crusaders, the Rangers, the Vigilantes, the Ku Klux Klan. And of such is the "Make 'em Work" society. As unassailable conditions of society brought into being those other organizations, so did unassailable conditions bring into being the "Make 'em Work" society. The little town of Chelsea was a border settlement—bordering on Kansas City. Before its admission to the larger city it was far from courts and police stations. Since its admission it has been every year a far. As in all little country towns there were two elements—one that worked and one that did not. The "Make 'em Work" society is the result of the "Make 'em Work" society.

For the sake of efficiency three members of the society have been appointed detectives, their duty being to observe and report to the main body all aggravated cases of laziness. So well has this work been performed that the "Make 'em Work" society, three months ago, eighteen offenders have been arrested and punished—and not a single offender has been reported to the police. The "Make 'em Work" society is the result of the "Make 'em Work" society.

Offenders are spanked. If proven guilty of laziness, the offender is then not more than twenty. The spanks may be paid for at a place called the "Make 'em Work" society. The "Make 'em Work" society is the result of the "Make 'em Work" society.

McNamara Case Resumes.
Talesman Nelson Being Examined in Dynamiting Case.
Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 13.—The examination of Talesman T. Nelson, of Pasadena, was the first proceeding scheduled for today before Judge Wiley Rodwell in the Superior Court in the murder trial of James B. McNamara. Nelson's attitude toward labor organizations and their members which was touched upon at the preceding session of court was made the subject of further inquiry for the defence under Attorney Clarence Darrow, and the rulings of the court on objections interposed by District Attorney John Fredricks and his aides were awaited, as showing what confidence would be placed upon the examination of the talesman.

P. O. Employees Overworked.
Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—Two hundred and seventy-five employees of the Winnipeg post office, gathered in the trades hall last night to protest in union against the hardships under which they labor, and a committee of thirty-five of their number will draw up a formal letter of complaint to the postmaster general. They claim that they are overworked and that promotions are not made from among their number. The grievances were presented at the Quebec meeting of the labor congress and at the trades congress at Calgary.

Elections October 3rd.
Ottawa, Oct. 15.—At Saturday's meeting of the cabinet council it was decided to alter the previously announced date for the by-elections rendered necessary by the formation of the new ministry. Nominations have been fixed for Oct. 2, instead of Oct. 15, with voting on Nov. 1, instead of Nov. 1. The change is necessary because polling cannot take place in Quebec on Nov. 1, All Saint's Day, it being church holiday.
