"A Masculine 'Thank the Lord.'"

By RUTH CAMERON.

The following remarkable letter, written by one woman to another, was sent me by a letter friend who found it among some papers which came into his possession. So I think it is without question a genuine letter.

I wonder if it will make your blood boil the way it did mine.

"Dear Madam," it runs, "I have in my service at present a former housemaid of yours, M. B. I discovered by chance the other day that she has in her possession a pair of fine Maltese lace cuffs or sleeve borders which I charged her with having appropriated. She told me that they were part of a lace set that her father gave her when she was married, at which statement I could only be amused.

"She has absolutely no idea of the value for she wears them on a common dress under very common black lace. I told her that if she would say to whom they belonged I would restore them and say no more about it. I am sure some one regrets having lost them, and as I know she was with you for some time I thought it might be possible that they were yours. In any case I consider it my duty to let you know. I have discharged her in consequence of her refusal to admit the theft, as I told her that such lace was quite out of place in the possession of anyone working in my kitchen.

"So kindly let me hear from you as soon as possible, as she will be leaving my house in a few days."

The letter friend who sent me that letter signed himself "A masculine, thank the Lord."

After reading it I didn't much blame him.

Of course there are plenty of women who are incapable of accusing another on such vague grounds. Nevertheless I fear that the habit of jumping at unjust conclusions with no real grounds to jump from, is inherently feminine.

Just the other day a woman told me that a man who is suspected of drinking had been on a drunk on a certain day. I asked her how she knew and she told me that she had been to his house to see him on business and his son had told him he was sick and that she could not see him. The idea that he might really be sick apparently never entered her head. And what was worse, instead of stating the facts and pointing out the inference which she drew from them, she went about stating her inferences as facts, and entirely omitting to mention the actual facts in the case. Of course he may have been intoxicated; personally I think he probably was, but she didn't know that he was, and not knowing she had no right to say so.

The law requires that an accused man shall be proved guilty. It does not assume his guilt and ask him to prove himself innocent. We call the law hard. What about the woman who assumes the guilt of anyone she suspects and does not even give him a chance to prove himself innocent.

Unreliability.

There's nothing handicaps you more than disregarding promises, and all the friends you had of yore you'll soon make doubting Thomases. The plumber says, "I'll send a man to fix the pipes that trouble you, with all the fixtures in a van, to-day, so help me W." I wait a day, I wait a week, the workman doesn't come along; the wretched pipes still leak and leak, and gases foul just hum along. Another plumber then I find, and tell him how I'm worrying, and how it goes with my weary mind, when he to work goes hurrying! He slings around his matted head, so glittering and friable, while I heap blessings on his head, because he is reliable. On time the leaking pipes he mends, and does his work desirably; I advise him to my friends, who sing his praises choralily. But as for him who did not cling to promises he made to me, he's queered himself—he cannot bring the weapons of his trade to me. Can he draw money from my purse? Ah, not the smallest smell he can; next time he'd only treat me worse—he's just that sort of peltican.

Pleurisy Pains Vanish!
Chest Colds Cured!

NERVILINE HAS NEVER FAILED TO CURE.

Don't suffer!

Nerviline is your relief.

Nerviline just rubbed on, lots of it, will ease that drawn, tight feeling over your ribs, will destroy the pain, will have you smiling and happy in no time.

I caught a cold last week while motoring," writes P. T. Mallory, from Linden. "My chest was full of congestion, my throat was mighty sore, and I had the fiercest stitch in my side you could imagine. As a boy I was accustomed to have my mother use Nerviline for all our minor ailments, and remembering what confidence she had in Nerviline, I sent out for a bottle at once. Between noon and eight o'clock I had a whole bottle rubbed on, and then got into a perspiration under the blankets. This drove the Nerviline in good and deep, and I woke up next morning fresh as a dollar and absolutely cured. Nerviline is now always part of my traveling kit, and I will never be without it."

The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical, or you can easily get the 25c. trial size from any dealer.

A Splendid Exhibit.

A display of cups and ribbons won by Mr. Walter Reid for the best exhibit of White Plymouth Rock Fowl at recent poultry shows, is now on exhibition in Hon. S. Milley's store window, Water Street. Mr. Reid has carried off several cups and ribbons for his poultry recently. At the local shows he has won two cups and thirty-eight ribbons, having won ten ribbons out of a possible twelve at the exhibition held at the Prince's Rink last week. His poultry has also won fame abroad. Last year he sent some fowl all the way to Indianapolis, Indiana, and the judges, who came from different sections of the State, were unanimous in awarding five silver cups and seven ribbons to Mr. Reid's exhibit of White Plymouth Rocks, which were declared to be the best birds at the show.

Christian Brothers' Collection Sunday.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—As already announced, a collection is to be taken up in aid of the Christian Brothers. It is needless to say that the response will be a generous one. It is now some forty years since the pioneer of the Order landed on our shores. They were then but three in number but like the grain of mustard seed they have increased tenfold in order to meet the demands of the many applicants that seek admission to their schools. The sound commercial education together with the thorough religious training their pupils receive, fit them for any walk in life. They may choose to enter either church or state as is clearly evident to all. Let this year's collection be one that the good Brothers will be proud of.

I remain,
Yours truly,

My dear Mother,—

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well, hoping this will find you all the same. Well, mother, I haven't got much strange news to tell you at present. I must say we are putting in a fine time as yet, but, mother, I can't say when we have to go to the front. We are leaving here on Monday but I can't say where we are going; you can put the address on my letter. Mother, I would like for you to see me now. I got my new uniform and my cap and gun and knapsack, so, mother, if you saw me when I get it all on you would say I look fine. Mother, dear, tell father not to be uneasy about me, tell him I will be back again yet safe and sound; tell him to let me know if he is getting the money that I left to him; tell him I want to know so I can find out if he is not getting it. If he is it is all right. I got one letter from you but you didn't say whether father got my clothes what I sent him from St. John's, and I sent John my watch and you didn't tell me whether they got it or not and I want to know. Give my love to all the boys around also give my love to all my brothers and sisters and take the best of love for yourself and father and Hazel. So, mother dear, I will close by wishing you all good bye and God bless you all for this time. Don't forget to write soon.

I remain,

Your loving son,

SELBY CLARKE.

Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd.

Gentlemen,—In July 1905 I was thrown from a road machine, injuring my hip and back badly and was obliged to use a crutch for 14 months. In Sept. 1906 Mr. Wm. Outridge, of Lachute urged me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I did with the most satisfactory results and to-day I am as well as ever in my life.

Yours sincerely,

MATTHEW X BAINES.

Maude Fealy a Great Attraction.

Nickel Patrons Delighted.

The great attraction at the Nickel Theatre last evening was the appearance of the wonderful actress, Maude Fealy who appeared as leading lady in "The Golden Cross." Miss Fealy was leading lady with the late Sir Henry Irving for a number of years and during that time appeared in all the principal theatres of the world with unusual success. She has been pronounced the greatest actress of the age, and the Nickel was fortunate in securing her. St. John's was delighted with her acting. This evening the picture will be repeated and those who were unable to attend last evening should do so to-day. This will be the last chance to see this great actress.

Stafford's Liniment should be in every home. No advance in the price.—sep19,tf
