Ninety Ninety per cent. of the sea-carrying trade of the world is done in English bottoms. Thanks to the English fleet these "common carriers" are free to sail. Restricted they may be by stringent or even unfair rules, but the fact remain that they are husy at the world task of the sail.

It is as if the "railroad systems" of the ocean were kept in operation instead of being tied up by a great strike. Recall the paralysis that fell upon all American business at the outbreak of the war before we understood that England's fleet was going to keep affoat and in business the overwhelming majority of the boats in which our foreign shipments were

What man can doubt that were termany to sweep the seas of British Germany to sweep the seas of Brilish warships her strong commercial grasp upon South America would be turned into an actual government grasp? Then we would be faced with the choice of throwing the Monroe doctrine overboard or fighting for it. In this sense the English fleet to-day is really the American fleet.

Our protest to Germany against the violation of Belgian neutrality, the greatest national crime of our century, would also have been justified.
We made the protest in one case, we did not make it in the other.

Let us not let this fact swerve us from the straight line of neutrality in which we have tried to guide our course. Let us not turn a reasonable note to a friendly nation into an oc-

> GLE PAPERS.
> Copenhagen, Jan. 12.—As an additional precaution to prevent illicit trading neutrals and belligerents through Denmark the government has given orders that all Danish steamer captains shall hereafter cary only one set of papers. Steam-hip owners are called upon to see that this regulation is carried out. This new order is due to the suspicion that captains of neutral ships some times carry double sets of papers in order to evade examination at the hands of British cruisers.
