The Envoy of the Dead.

(Edith Cavell at the Peace Conference.)
Did a white moth flutter against the window pane?
Did a light wind whisper through the council hall?
The great men looked up, to see if it would come again,
And a listening silence fell upon them all.

Then they seemed to see her, coming with her bandaged eyes;
There was blood upon her dress where her wounds were bare;
So they placed a chair for her, without question or surprise,
For they knew the mighty dead had chosen to send here there.

The mighty Nation of the Dead, who died on land and sea,
And by the road, you know their wounds, O Christ on Calvary!

They shone her, for she knew them all, soldier and little child—
The girls who in an hour grew old had sent a word to her;
Within her quiet hands she held their wrongs unconquered—
She led a long procession, like a white-robed crucifer.

And while they spoke of food and trade, she sat and listened, quietly;
And when they spoke of armaments, had no word to say to them.
But when they spoke of justice, she spoke in simple dignity,
Straight as the wooden cross men set outside Jerusalem.

The Prince of Peace Himself has said: "Repentance is the only gate."
There is no devious way to it. The way is narrow and is straight.

The show fell softly, like white moths against the window pane; it may be that a little wind went through the council room;
They seemed to see her coming back, to speak with living men again—
The Envoy of the Dead that wait beyond the silence of the tomb!—
Louise Driscoll, in the New York Times.

Cardinal Gibbons Favors

Strict Regulation of Manufacture and Sale of Liqueur.
Baltimore, Jan. 21.—Cardinal Gibbons, in a statement issued last night, says: "I have always been in favor of strict regulation of the manufacture and sale of liquor instead of absolute prohibition, because by a strict regulation the liberation of individuals is preserved, whereas by Prohibition we face legislation which in the long run cannot be carried out, and an early result of Prohibition will be the secret and illicit manufacture and sale of bad liquor, whereby the Government will be deprived of a large revenue, besides being put to enormous expense in the employment of agents to enforce the law. Moreover, in the carrying out of the law, I see also an invasion of the home, which up to now all men have agreed is a sacred and holy place. These agents may enter our homes with the violence of burglars and the impunity of officers of the law."

Modern Perils in Ancient Seas.

(From the Boston Herald.)
In the old mythologies mariners dreaded the passage of the straits guarded upon the one side by the rock of Scylla and upon the other by the whirlpool of Charybdis. But if the old perils have lost their terrors for modern navigators, dangers far greater and more difficult to avoid now threaten them. The other day a French ship was sunk within the strait of evil fame with a loss of 500 passengers. A floating mine caused her end. Recklessly, and in the face of such scraps of paper as the rules formulated at The Hague, mines were sown in the war and the ocean currents have distributed them all over the world. Eternal vigilance must be the price of safety, for mines have been found thousands of miles away from the place where they were released. Such accidents as befall the French ship have followed all modern wars, but so many mines were loosed in the world war that the danger is correspondingly increased. Man's inventions are more to be dreaded than the storied perils of antiquity.

Quakers to Pres. Wilson.

The Society of Friends has sent the following message to President Wilson:—
We thank God for the stand which we believe you are making for the fuller expression of the spirit of Christ in international affairs. We believe your task in the forthcoming conference is essentially a spiritual one, and we desire to support you in it by our prayer and faith. We are confident that the Spirit of God our Father, working in the hearts of men and women in all nations, is leading us to break with an evil past, marked by rivalry, suspicion and opposing alliances, and to greet, in brotherly love, a new order based on generous trust and true reconciliation. Such an order, expressed in a federation of free, disarmed peoples, working through open diplomacy and undisturbed circulation of truth is the hope of countless common men and women like ourselves. May God help you as you seek in co-operation with your colleagues, to realize this splendid hope for humanity.—London Times.
