Just Folks By EDGAR A. GUEST.

Work is a drudge
And a task-master stern.
Severe as a judge.
Who compels us to learn
The wages he pays;
He is pittless, too,
And harsh in his ways
As he bosses the crew.

Work is a king
That forever commands
His whip lashes sting
As above us he stands,
He piles on the loads
And drives us ahead
Over terrible roads
Till the daylight is sped.

Work isn't as fine
As his half-brother Play,
His eyes seldom shine
In so merry a way;
There are pleasanter things
Than the tasks you must do,
But none of them brings
The real glories to you.

Work is a drudge
And a driver by day.
As stern as a judge.
But there's ne other way
Of rising to fame.
Or of serving your need
In life's daily game—
It's by work you succeed.

Household Notes.

Grated Roquefort cheese is delicious in French dressing. A nice way to serve sausages is on a bed of mashed potatoes.

A border of diced beets is attractive for a dish of sliced mutton. Squash is very tempting fried in butter and served in hot sweet cream. A little chopped onion is an appetizing addition to fried mushro Raisins not only add nutriment,
