STUDEBAKER CORPORATION.

Rising 4000 of New Models Turned Out—Big Success—Plans for Record-Breaking Final Quarter Out-setting Current Development Quarter.

(From Boston News Bureau, Sept. 18.)
Boston—Knowledge in the automobile industry that Studebaker Corporation turned out no cars in June and only about 25 cars in July has led to the natural impression that such figures reflected a sharp slowing up of business. But those in and out of Wall Street conversant with Studebaker affairs are aware that Studebaker closed down last Memorial

Day to make thorough-going plant preparations for the manufacture of its new model and that as a consequence its Detroit and South Bend units virtually suspended operations until well into August.

Production of the new models in August was about 1600 cars and up to the middle of September some 2500 additional left the factories making a total output to date of rising 4000. The "stepping up" process has purposely been slow so as to make sure of quality perfect cars. The daily output, however, is now around 300 cars and should soon begin to gather momentum with the prospect of 6000 cars for all September.

Obviously, with a production of only around 7500 cars in the current quarter or less than the 10,000 required to stock dealers display rooms, the third quarter's results will make an indifferent showing. Balance for the common will be more or less unimportant as compared with $2.07 and the $1.81 returned in the second and first quarters respectively.

But it is the fourth quarter that will tell the story. The new models with their various new features have attracted wide attention in Chicago, Detroit, New York and Boston this week and have imparted just as big a sales fillip as had been anticipated. Selling efforts and production schedules are now being lined up to make the final three months the biggest quarter in Studebaker's history, which means sales of around 44,000 cars. It is this period that is expected to bring the balance for the second half year close to the $3.88 total for the first six months.

Fined $50 for Incendiarism

Patrick Turner, belonging to Gambo, who has been held on remand in the penitentiary for the past month, charged with feloniously and maliciously setting fire to a certain store, the property of Michael Broderick, at Gambo on the 29th of August last, came up for trial before Judge Morris in the Magistrate's Court this morning. The accused was represented by Mr. C. E. Hunt. The evidence of Detective Bennett, who was sent to investigate into the matter. He explained to the court that he gained sufficient information to attach the blame to the accused. After making the arrest, the accused was given the regular caution but later confessed his guilt, though he claimed that he had no intention to burn the place down. A sworn statement made by the prisoner to this effect was read and put in as evidence. The prisoner claimed that his only object was to scare Broderick with whom he had a personal difference. The store to which he set fire by means of a blanket saturated with kerosene oil, was situated about 19 feet from Broderick's house and the fire was started at eleven at night. Having let the fire be walked away and watched the effect. After the blanket had burned and the claspboard scorched the fire went out of its own accord. In his plea for the prisoner Mr. C. E. Hunt pointed out that there was no indication of malice and that the intention was merely to smoke Broderick out. The judge imposed a fine $50.00 or as an alternative a sentence of 2 months imprisonment.
