T. F. Sherman engineer at the Mercer reformitory and a provincial constable in the credit of capturing the girl McCowet. The other girl "Blonde" Carrie, who is attempting to escape received such a bad fall, in suffering from injury to the spine, and the probabilities are that she will be a cripple for life.

A very exciting runaway took place in front of the World editorial rooms at 5:30 last evening. A wagon belonging to Trimble's transfer company came dashing along King street at a terrible rate, and when opposite our office a young man named Chas. Green jumped in the wagon from the rear and grabbed the reins. When Yonge street was reached the horse turned south, but before the furious steeds had come to Colborne street Green had them perfectly in hand and reined up.

Yesterday morning a young man named John Graham was killed at the Davenport station. He drove his wagon alongside a Northern freight car for the purpose of taking on a load of lumber, and in attempting to remove the stake from one end of the car, when it suddenly broke, and the lumber coming over crushed his legs against one of the wagon wheels. He was removed by some workmen who saw the accident, and who accompanied Dr. Johnson of Yorkville. The young man, however, died in a few minutes. An inquest was not considered necessary. It is a strange and sad considering that three years ago Dr. Johnson held an inquest on Graham's brother, who was killed while working in a brick-yard.

A SHREWD DUTCHMAN.

He Discusses the Mutilated Currency Question With a Street Car Conductor.

"I can't take that nickel," said a horse car conductor to a man who got in at city hall.

"Vot was de matter mit dot goin'" asked the passenger, blandly.

"It's no good. It's got a hole in it," replied the conductor, craftily.

"Is dot so? Off you please you show me a hole!"

"Look at it. We can't take any such money as that."

"Excuse me," smiled the passenger, and he handed over a dime.

"That's worse yet," growled the conductor.

"Vot dot dime full of holes too?" asked the passenger, looking up innocently.

"Here's a whole side chipped out. We ain't allowed to take mutilated money, and the conductor made it back."

"So?" inquired the passenger. "Haf you got changes for helf a dollar?" and he passed over another coin.

"What's this?" "It's as bald as a Peacock. There ain't a scratch on it to show whether it's an overcoat button or a skating rink. Haven't you got any money?"

"Vell, I should make smiles!" said the passenger, good humoredly. Here it came to the toll; and you can bust it together ven off dot five tollars," and he handed over a bill torn in four or eight pieces.

"I don't want no more fooling," said the conductor. "If you can't pay your fare, get off."

"Vell, don't make so many troubles. I will pay you," and he pulled out a Mexican quarter. "Gif me bennies," he suggested.

"Look here, are you going to pay your fare or not?"

"Of course. May be you vas vating for dot money," and he took back his quarter and substituted an English sixpence.

"Now, you get off this car," roared the conductor.

"Vere has dese cars got by?" asked the passenger, rising to obey.

"Fulton ferry," said the conductor.

"Den I may as vell get over. You dell dem companies dot some times dey make more money as oder times off dey take vot der dey get instead off going midion nothings, don't it?"

"And the smiling passenger, having ridden to the end of the line, crossed the ferry, observing to himself, "Dot was pater off safe each money, and some times I go over to East Nyarick und it don't cost me no more as nodings at all."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A PALACE OF ELEGANCE.

McCONKEY'S NEW CONFECTIONERY STORE AND LUNCHEON PARLOR.

The Handsomest Establishment in the Town—Chaste and Rich Fittings—Every Convenience and Comfort for Visitors—The Kind of Business Mr. McConkey Does.

The magnificent new confectionery store and luncheon parlors of Mr. George E. McConkey at Yonge and Richmond streets have been attracting the attention of the public for the past two days. The establishment is, without doubt, the most elegant and commodious of the kind that has yet been fitted up in Toronto, and speaks volumes for the enterprise and ability of the proprietor, who in a few years has risen to the top of his business. Mr. McConkey has already made a name for himself in the confectionery and refreshment lines. With his enlarged and elegant premises and his increased facilities for meeting all demands upon him. Mr. McConkey can boast of being able to supply anything and everything required of him in the best possible style, and on the shortest notice. It is to such citizens as Mr. McConkey that Toronto is indebted for its fame as a live progressive and first-class city.

Now to an extended notice of Mr. McConkey's new establishment. The building at the south-east corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, so long occupied by Mr. Neil C. Love as a drug store, has undergone a complete transformation for Mr. McConkey's business. The window sashes have been filled with the best of plate glass, and the entrance has been rendered more spacious. Looking in from the street one is struck by the chaste, uniform and elegant appearance of the interior. Entering the visitor finds himself or herself delighted and impressed with the beauty of the surroundings. The walls and ceilings are of the purest white, and the corners, show cases and mirrors are of the finest and most artistic design, and finished with a due regard to elegance, harmony and effect. The plans and designs of the interior and the decorative work were drawn by Mr. W. R. Strickland, under special instructions from Mr. McConkey. The counters are a delicate white, ornamented with designs in the best of walnut. Behind each counter stands two magnificent and costly show-cases, containing the best goods that can be found in the confectionery market. These show-cases are a model of elegance. The frames are of walnut and other rich woods, and are filled with the best of plate-glass, the finishings being of silver, the whole forming a beautiful and harmonious appearance. The cases are filled with admiration. These cases were the work of Mr. Wallace Millham of Adelaide street, who has filled his orders remarkably well. On either side of the store and between the show cases hangs a large and handsome mirror framed to match the show-cases, and caped with beautifully-carved woodwork. The effect of the show-cases and the mirrors is very striking. In the middle of the floor stands a large silver-trimmed show-case, filled with the latest and most delicate novelties, bon bons and other articles delightful to the eye and exquisite to the taste. The stock of the store is varied and attractive. Mr. McConkey imports all his best lines of confectionery from New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

"How is it that you do not manufacture these yourself," said The World with a friendly feeling for the N. P. "Because," answers Mr. McConkey, "they are special lines of goods and the American manufacturers keep men working on them all the time, while here we could not afford to do that, but would have to put them on mixed work."

"And yet you manage to sell these delicious delicacies at a reasonable rate," said The World.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. McConkey, "our prices are so large that we can afford to sell them at small profits, thus giving the public rich and fine goods at the lowest price while we make as much as others that sell less quantities at a higher figure."

It fairly makes one's mouth water to think of all the delicious goods that Mr. McConkey's store contains. The cakes and pastries are enough to make the small boy rave for a week and think of last summer's picnic with mingled feeling of pain and regret that it has been and gone and that another will not be along for eight months. Mr. McConkey makes a specialty of his pastries and cakes and delivers them to all parts of the city with prompt despatch.

From the store the visitors pass beneath a large archway into the luncheon parlors, a spacious and handsomely furnished apartment. A lovely vase stands on a pedestal on either side of the archway. The parlor is carpeted with the best of Brussels carpets, the tables are all marble-topped, and the chairs are constructed after the most comfortable pattern. A novel and convenient hat and coat rack hangs between each table. Retiring rooms for ladies and gentlemen will be found at the rear of the apartment. One of the most handsome thirty-day calendar clocks adorns the room, which for elegance and comfort cannot be rivaled in the city. Add to the fact that Mr. McConkey's bill of fare affords to his patrons the greatest scope for variety of taste and range of price, and all that need be has been said.

The lighting, ventilation and heating of the store and luncheon parlors are of the most approved kind. The store contains three large plate-glass windows and is thoroughly ventilated, while it is heated with hot air, thus avoiding all smoke and coal dust. The luncheon parlors are lighted with a number of beautifully cut and stained windows, adorned with rich lambrequins. The gas lighting apparatus of the establishment is one of the most perfect features. Three large and magnificent crystal chandeliers hang from the ceiling, and shed a ray of light at night that is perfectly dazzling. The crystals were put in by Messrs. D. S. Keith & Co., of King street west, under special orders from Mr. McConkey. They were imported from England and cannot be made in this city. In themselves they are well worth a visit to the store. The proprietor is justly proud of them, and they are universally admired.

In Mr. McConkey's establishment all orders are promptly and correctly filled. The business being conducted in a systematic manner. The help attendants are polite and attentive. Each department is connected with the store by a speaking tube, and every comfort and attention is provided for customers.

The kitchen, bake shop and candy room are models of what such places should be. The kitchen is fitted up with the latest improved apparatus for cooking and heating, and orders can be filled in the shortest possible period of time. The bake-shop is well equipped with the latest and most perfect clean and furnished with Hunter's complete ovens and hot and cold water and complete utensils for carrying on the cooking of breads and cakes. The candy room is also fitted up with the most modern machinery for the manufacture of all ordinary kinds of candy.

Mr. McConkey employs twenty-four persons in his establishment. Besides his complete confectionery and luncheon parlors, Mr. McConkey carries a large stock of fancy cake trimmings and is prepared to fill orders for wedding breakfasts, reception lunches, and all kinds of such repairs on the shortest notice.

OSOGODE HALL NOTES. Judgment in the Bellville ferry case has been reserved.

The case of Adamson v. Adamson is under consideration in the court of appeal. This is a dispute about right to the possession or ownership of a lot of land in the township of Toronto in the county of Peel.

Before Justice Oler the case of Fitch v. Mitchell was concluded, and judgment given for defendant, the plaintiff's bill being dismissed.

In Sheriff v. McCallum a motion for a prohibition restraining the judge of the first revision court of York from enforcing a judgment against the London mutual fire insurance company, as garnishee, was made. Judgment reserved.

In re Stayer, Dalton McCarthy, Q.C., moved for a rule to quash the communication of statute labor and for enforcing a judgment against the London mutual fire insurance company, as garnishee, was made. Judgment reserved.

The seats for Ross's performance at the Grand Opera House next week are being rapidly taken up, and the engagement promises to be one of the most successful that has yet taken place in Toronto. This is probably the only opportunity that we will have of witnessing the great Italian's acting, and those who love to see the historic actor presented in his best and truest form should not fail to take advantage of it. Hamlet Monday night; Romeo Tuesday night; Othello Wednesday night.
