CANADA'S TRADE

(Montreal Herald)

Canada's capacity for business, as revealed by the latest Customs returns, is nothing short of amazing. Our trade increase for July shows an increase of no less than 141 per cent as compared with last year. For the four-month period including July the total trade reached the record-breaking figure of $766,372,532, as against $374,646,906 in the corresponding period of last year. The balance of trade is now heavily in our favor, thus completely reversing the conditions obtaining before the war. Whereas our imports for July amounted to $63,622,587, our exports reached the dizzy altitude of $404,964,270. Nobody could have believed that such a remarkable achievement could have been effected in so short a time. Of course conditions are highly favorable for trade prosperity, owing to the war. It is to be noted too, that orders for foreign goods are mostly brought to us instead of our having to go to look for them. The chief lesson to be learned from present conditions is the capacity of Canada for foreign business, and the need of building up an organization, both individual and national, that will keep the orders rolling in from abroad after they cease to come of their own volition.

A TRIBUTE TO LORD KITCHENER

Oh noble King we mourn with you, as our nation kneels to pray,
The Hero of the soldier's heart, our Great Leader of the day,
So modest in your daily life,
at home he made one feel,
But in his velvet Scabbard, there lurked a Blade of Steel.

No widow's heart will bleed for him, no love it came his way,
His heart and soul was with his King that we may win the day.
We'll miss him from our Councils,
so noble brave and true
So much depended on his skill and help to pull us through.

We know of many fights you've had in Africa and Soudan,
That you should die without a fight close by your native land
Me think some traitor in your ranks, if so he sure should die,
It is a shame to harbour there an English German Spy
Your wisdom in the ways of war, all Nations bow to you
And now you've sunk beneath the waves Oh say, it is not true
Oh Soldier of a hundred fights, and Honours by the score
Seems very strange to me that you should sink beneath the sea
And be with us no more.

You ask for Britons Manhood and Britons brain and brawn
You raised a mighty Army the finest sun shone on
One came from out the palace and from many a Lordly Hall
And all the various walks of life
Kitcheners were they all
And bravely hurled the Prussians back against shrapnell gas and ball

Some were marshalled to our flag they were of dusky hue
They came from far off India where the scented spices grew
They loved you when you soldiered there in Indians sun kissed Land
They heard of Britains peril and came to lend a hand.

Some were gathered around your flag from lands across the foam
And never more will they behold their own Canadian home
They came from the office they came from the plough
What of those Heros, where are they now

Some lie sleeping far over the foam
They died for their freedom they died for their home.

And what about Australia we know the work you've done
You fought well for our glorious cause you stuck well to your guns
And now you've come among us, we greet you with heart in hand God willing

We'll fight together till peace spreads o'er our land
12,000 miles you travelled you answered to the call you did not fear to die
Or face the cannon ball.

Oh Noble Lord We'll leave thee with Gods blessing and his grace
Your soldiers they will meet you there in that far happier place
But God will raise another man to lead us in the fight
Our cause it is a righteous one. We battle for the right.

By one of his Soldiers
LEWIS V. BAKER B.E.F.
Melvern Square.

Jerome K. Jerome is the latest British author to offer his services to the front. British authors have done nobly in this war. Most of the distinguished ones are too old for active military service but they have been working in hospitals, driving ambulances and motor trucks, and otherwise contributing to the nation's cause.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excited; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

German Deportation of French Women

fifteen men with fixed bayonets, battering the doors of the houses, ordering the inhabitants out into the street. Outside each house there hung a list of all the inhabitants, and there was no means of escape. An officer, accompanied by a non-commissioned officer, selected the women to be given from ten minutes to an hour and a half in which to prepare themselves for their departure and bid farewell to their families.

Holy Week!

"On Easter Sunday there was a truce, and the rumour went round among the French that the vehement protests of the Bishop had moved the German general's heart, that the neutral Powers had intervened; but when the work was resumed again in the early hours of Monday morning the dismay of disappointment added to the whole horror. For a whole week this infamy continued. The Germans imposed upon themselves only two merciful restrictions. They left children below the age of 14 and their mothers and in taking girls below the age of 20 they took some older members of their family with them.

"Selection among the rest of the population was governed by general considerations. Girls whose hands showed signs of work were taken in preference to the others; servant girls were taken nearly everywhere, and in many cases their mistresses declining to be separated from them, went with them to share the unknown future. The proportion of women taken was between 20 and 30 per cent. Two hundred schoolgirls of 15 were taken away, but on the whole it was the labouring classes who suffered, and in some instances young girls of good family who had been removed have been sent back.

A Sweat of Blood

"The raids were accompanied by terrible scenes of grief and sorrow, and not a few elderly people lost their reason when they saw their daughters being carried off. Some of the men, especially of the Land-sturm, seemed to be conscious that they were engaged in shameful work; some of the officers, too, admitted that nothing could ever cleanse the German flag from this fresh stain put upon it. Indeed, it is said in Lille that a number of officers and men are in the Citadel awaiting their trial for refusing to dishonor themselves.

"By this act of honour they spared themselves scenes which one would have thought might melt the heart even of a German—the maddened woman whose husband, son, and daughter were taken, who cursed them in their race, in their wives, and in their children; or the woman who broke out into a sweat of blood when her boy was taken, and whose shattered reason refused to recognize him when he was brought back.

Victims' Defiant Spirit

"Against all this black horror stands out the splendid spirit of its victims. On leaving their homes they were collected in the churches and schools of their district, numbered and labelled, and carted off in cattle wagons to the station, harlots and young girls, ragmuffins and merchants, all joined in the common misery. Yet, as the first of these slave-gangs drove to the railway station, these wretched folk were defiantly shouting "Vive la France," and for the first time since the Germans entered Lille rang out the song of freedom and revolt, the "Marseillaise." Those left behind had an attitude no less noble.

"I saw these herds of people go, wrote a man of Roubaix. 'It breaks one's heart. The women as they passed tried to throw little parcels to their husbands, brothers, or sons; the young fellows on the whole held themselves sturdily; some of them were singing. What moved us most was the departure of the women and young girls who had been taken. You can imagine the state of parents who saw young girls of between 16 and 20 years of age going off in the midst of young chaps of all sorts and conditions. And whether? That no one knows. The wind of sorrow is blowing round us; but for all that we keep our courage and are confident.
