The papers were read and the parties heard, when Professor McKnight led the Presbytery in prayer for divine direc-tion. After which Mr Henry stated that having given the whole matter his serious and prayerful consideration he felt it to be his duty to decline the call and gave a full statement of his of reasons for doing so .-In this decision the Presbytery unani-monsly acquiesced.

The deligation to Shelburne reported that they had held meetings in the different sections of that congregation and that the people had readily and cheerfully increased their subscription for the support of ordinances to Scio. The Theological Hall

Was opened on the 1st Nov., by a very able Lecture from Rev. Professor McKnight on Hebrew Poetry. He shewed that the most marked feature of the Poetry of the Hebrew writers is what is known as "Parallelism," which he explained and illustrated in a manner so lucid and ipteresting as to secure the attention not only of the ministers and students present, of whom there were a goodly number, but also of a general audience of considerable extent.

A gentleman of ability, who was expect. . ed to address the students, not being able to be present, Rev. Dr. Ross, as previously requested, addressed the people. We regret that our limits prevent our giving even an outline of the Dr's, remarks, farther than just to indicate his line of observation, viz., that the Hall was the property of the whole people and they were all deeply interested in its effi iency. They could not devolve the whole responsibility on the Professors and the Board. He then shewed that the Professors were entitled to a prompt and. liberal pecuniary support, maintaining that two properly sustained would prove more benefic al and successful than three "inadequately supported that the students should be encouraged and cheered by a reasonable amount of social enjoyment, and more es pecially, that both Professors and Students should know and feel that they were sustained by the earnest provers of all the Lord's people.

There are ten Students in attendance.
