THE VICE-CHANCELLOR,
THE UNIVERSITY, READING.

30 March 1937

My dear Eustace,

I intended to write long before this, but our Chancellor's death was a terrible blow, and I have been overwhelmed. I am now making use of the Easter week-end, at home, to write some important letters, just before going down to Cornwall for a fortnight.

We were awfully glad about Elizabeth's post at Crosby Hall, and delighted to see her in the flesh just before she took it up.

About Göttingen. I think you will like to see a summary of reports from most of the British Univs, which was circulated for our Vice-Chancellors' meeting on March 13th. Here it is. I intended to send it without delay, and procured a spare copy for the purpose, but delay occurred.

As you will see, Oxford has broken our ranks by deciding to send a delegate. None other is doing so*. The Cambridge report is not included in the list enclosed; but Cambridge decided to send an address only. When I received and answered
