No one who examines the excellent samples of British Columbia fruit which are now displayed in the King William street offices of the Canadian Pacific railway company can doubt the great future before Canada's western province as a fruit growing country. The samples which have reached Archer Baker, the European traffic agent, through L. A. Hamilton, the Land Commissioner, from the Vancouver board of trade, are admirably representative of the capacities of the province. They number 150, and include plums of very many different varieties, peaches, apricots, cultivated black berries, strawberries, white, red, and black currants, grapes, pears, and apples, as well as vegetables, such as beans and peas, and represent the growth of the districts of New Westminster, Victoria, Vancouver, Chilliwack, Lulu Island, Ladner's Landing, Port Hammond, etc. They form probably the best collection of Pacific fruit that has ever reached this country. —Canadian Gazette.
