17. In 1884 Samuel Waddington, in answer to the public notice, called at the Land Office to prove up his claim, but was refused. Robert Dunsmuir was at the office door and referred him to Smithe. Waddington interviewed Smithe and was informed that there was a dispute between them and the Government, but to rest assured he would get the land, no one else would get it. <sup>W. A. It was not until Oct. 29th, 1885, that Waddington was notified that he would not get the land.
