and Success in this grand Affair, from its Commencement to its Conclusion, should be taken Notice of, as the Effect of a propitious Providence super-intending & presiding in it. Every advantageous Circumstance, every subservient and auxiliary Incident, as well as the grand and final Event, is to observed, as the Fruit of Divine Benignity. All tends to heighten the Glory and the Mercy of the Success: and all conspires to demand our grateful Acknowledgments to "the Lord of Hosts", the supreme Author of Victory.

We are called, on this Occasion to sing both of Mercy, and of Judgment; to fing of both "to the Lord our God"; to celebrate the Wonders of Mercy to us, and of Judgment on our Enemies. - Yea, his Judgments on ourselves, in the general Calamity of War, and in particular Disasters, are not to be forgotten, even in our Songs of Praise. As mournful and joyful Events are mingled in Providence, we should have our Reflexions on both, in the Exercise of various Passions, corresponding to each. Antecalent humbling Events might be design'd in Providence to prepare a just Allay to future Joys: And the Evil intermixed with the Good we receive at the Hand of the LORD, may well ferve to correct and qualify the Pleasure his Benefits give us. It will be wife in us to to temper the Joy that now expands our Breasts, by proper Reflexions on the inauspicious and dark Appearances preceding our late Successes, & on the disastrous Events attending them. One Circumstance, in particular, should not a little affect us, that human Life has so often been facrificed (by the Sword, or Disease, or Accident) in the Purfuit of Victory; and as Victory is apprehended to have been lost, in one memorable Instance, by "the Fall of the Mighty,* fo it hath in several Instances been purchased at the Expence of some of the most precious Blood, in the Fall of heroic Generals + and other gallant Officers and Men. These are striking Events, at the Remembrance of which we can scarce refrain mingling Tears with our present Joys. But the Sorrow for former Losses, of this Kind, we must balance with the Joy of our last Successes being obtained without any fuch fuc! Eff wha tho

Cor ble are wil rity

Ac

is r mo Mi a C fho

the

nen

ma

Joy ulti Vie on Mi Mi bef

in l fob cri He

boa W ye tha

nal fioi

the

The brave Lord Howe, in that fruitless Attempt at Ticonderoga.

⁺ Gen. Wolfe, and Gen. Prideaux, who both expired amidst Glory, in the near View of Conquest.