Sour Milk Need Not Be Wasted

Dairy Inspector of Maine's Department of Agriculture Comments on Saving in the Home

"At this time of universal food conservation I believe it is fitting for me to mention a few of the most common products of the dairy, showing the enormous waste in these articles of food and giving methods by which they might be utilized," writes Brooks Brown, dairy inspector of the Maine Department of Agriculture.

"For example, suppose half a cup of milk is wasted every day in every home in the United States. It would amount to 212,500,000 quarts a year. It takes about 400,000 cows to produce this amount of milk and an army of men to handle and deliver it. Even if half a cup is wasted in only one out of every fifty homes, this total still makes an appalling figure.

"This is particularly deplorable when one realizes that milk is one of the most nutritious of foods, and skin-milk is almost as valuable as whole. The skin-milk may be used for soups and cereal dishes, while sour milk can be used for cottage cheese or in the making of bread.

"In regard to butter, it has been estimated that, if each household in this country wastes only one-fourth of an ounce per day, just one small pint, it would amount to 114,062,500 pounds the course of a year. The product of over half a million cows, or about 265,261,250 gallons of milk, would be used in making this amount of butter. If only half the above mentioned amount is wasted and probably this estimate is very low, we should still have reason to view the matter with the utmost concern. All butter left on plates after a meal should be collected and used for cooking rather than scraped off into the garbage can.

"During the summer months the waste of milk, due to souring, is enormous. This milk should, as I stated above, be utilized. The manufacture of cottage cheese is a convenient way for its disposal. When the milk has soured enough to form a firm curd, it should be cut or broken up. Next heat is applied gradually until the temperature reaches ninety-six degrees to 100 degrees F. The curd should be stirred gently until this temperature is obtained. The temperature is held at ninety-six degrees to 100 degrees F. until the curd feels fairly firm and the whey appears clear. Then drain off the whey, place the curd in a cheesecloth bag, and hang it up until the whey has drained out. The curd should next be broken up and salt mixed in to suit the taste."
