A PLEA FOR SWETTENHAM

(THE REVERSE OF THE JAMAICAN MEDAL)

Well Known Toronto Correspondent Tells the Other Side of the Jamaican Incident.

Canadians have already learned there were two sides to the Swettenham case. The Toronto News, but just how much there was to be said on the side of the British governor is perhaps best told in a letter from a Toronto citizen now in Jamaica.

Mr. R. E. A. Land, writes to the News from Montego Bay, Jamaica. He points out that Governor Swettenham intended that the United States marines should land, and gave express orders to that effect. It is reported the colonial secretary directed the orders and invited Admiral Davis to land.

U. S. Troops a Menace. "The presence of American armed men was a menace to the peace of the island, and tended to create the very trouble it was meant to prevent. The American color prejudice is well known and resented by the black people of the West Indies.

Would Have Been a Spectacle. "The spectacle of American troops keeping order on a British island would have been used by the yellow press of New York and elsewhere to foster a feeling of the instability of British rule, and of American intervention and annexation when the time suits.

Additional Reasons. "But there are additional reasons justifying this. In the first place the government of the island is a military dictatorship, and the admiral's point-blank statement is vouched for by Admiral Davis in his report to his superior officer.
