> Not since the erection of the General Public Hospital has it contained more patients than it does at the present time. The list is well over the hundred mark and with the wards and private rooms well filled the physicians and nurses have no idle moments but are kept almost continually busy. There are at present three patients in the Epidemic Hospital and thirtyfive typhoid fever patients in the main hospital. The children's, or the Almon ward, is almost overflowing with youngsters who are being treated for different ailments.

In Ward C, where the majority of surgical cases are attended, there is hardly a day but what every one of the twenty-two beds are occupied. The cases are various.
