Making it Easy For Soldier's Wife

"A soldier's wife" who received a telegram from the War Office that her husband was dangerously ill at a base hospital at Havre furnishes a vivid account of the manner in which her sudden journey was facilitated by the various British and French authorities.

After the notification came, she says, "I rush to the Foreign Office and learn that I will have to wait a couple of days for the passport. The War Office telegram is produced. Yes, it may be managed. I have to get photographs and it is 3.30 p. m. before the passport is issued. Then to the French Consulate for the visa. 'No more to-day!' Again I flourish my War Office wire. It is enough after passing the eagle eye of the detective work is accomplished. 'Passports again examined. Where are you going to?' 'Why have you come?' Telegram again shown. 'Have you a written permit from the War Office?' 'No, I was informed that by notifying the war office before I started I should be met at this side.' 'Stand aside a moment.' After a few minutes I am introduced to an officer who directs me to the base headquarters. After sending up my name I am shown up to the A.D.M.S. Department and there most courteously received. No questions were asked, but I am at once informed that my husband is now off the danger list and has been transferred to a certain hospital ship.

"They ring up for a Red Cross motor ambulance to convey me to the ship, and a pass is given to visit my husband at the moment I was getting the ship again. I am most courteously received. I spend some three or four hours with my husband, find him much better, and the surgeon-major tells me he is waiting for an ambulance train from the front, and as soon as it comes in they sail for England. If the boat sailed that night he would try and let me know, and he did.

"Then I went to the Y. M. C. A. They gave me a choice of hotels and boarding houses, and upon my inquiring the different charges received the reply, 'Oh, we arrange to pay that for you, but I am afraid I was a bit short-sighted. The head of the office told me they had been doing this for the last four months, but I was the fourth person only who had been sent to the front to inquire the reasons for the lack of enterprise. In due course I was informed the hospital ship was leaving that night so I too left. There were the usual formalities to go through, but without the least delay. I returned to my hotel, and matters for me.—London Daily Mail.

FIRE IN PRISON CAMP.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
 Amsterdam, June 2, via London.—The Cologne Gazette says a serious fire has occurred in the prison camp at Torgau, Prussia. Barracks for interned officers, over a stretch of 150 yards were destroyed. The officers' servants helped to fight the flames and saved most of their masters' effects. No lives were lost. The cause of the fire is unknown.

GOOD WORK DONE

By Special Wire to the Courier.
 London, June 2.—The log of the British flying corps for the past month shows that there have been less than 35 battles in the air, in which victory is claimed for the British airmen. Two encounters with Zeppelins are included in the list.

GOOD WORK DONE

By Special Wire to the Courier.
 Toronto District Baptist church reported excellent progress at the annual meeting. Galt's cityhood was fittingly celebrated yesterday.

SAFETY FIRST

On Lake Steamships.
 When the Noronic, the flagship of the Northern Navigation Company's fleet, leaves Sarnia on June 29th on her initial trip of the season across the Great Lakes, that fine vessel will carry a staff captain. This appointment marks the inauguration of a new system designed to insure the safety of travellers using the Grand Trunk rail and lake route between Eastern and Western Canada.

While directly under the orders of the captain, the duties of the staff captain will consist of looking after the discipline of the ship, seeing that the crew is properly stationed and thoroughly understands the life boat and fire drill, that passengers are treated with courtesy and respect and their comforts and needs looked after, and that the ship is kept in spick and span order, so as to allow the captain of the ship to devote his entire time and ability to the safe navigation of the vessel. This will enable the officers to be on the bridge at all times and prevent their attention being distracted from the work of navigating the ship.

The other vessels of the fleet which carry passengers—the S.S. Hamonic and the S. S. Huronic—will also have the advantage of this new form of discipline. The Northern Navigation lines, in addition, being equipped with large, new, collapsible life boats and several new devices of floating apparatus, the company doing everything in its power to safeguard the lives of its passengers.

ONE IS RELEASED.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
 London, June 2.—According to The Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent, the Hamburg prize court has decided to release the Dutch steamer Batavier V, but has condemned the Dutch steamer Zaanstroom to be held, asserting that over half her cargo is contraband.

The Batavier V and Zaanstroom were captured in the North Sea by German submarines last March and taken into Zeeland. The capture of the steamers caused considerable comment in Holland. German newspapers asserted that the seizures were due to the presence of Belgian soldiers aboard the steamers.
