REFORM OF THE LORDS

This Question Dwarfs All Others Before the British Electorate.

SALISBURY SKIRKED THE ISSUE

His Reticence on the Subject Causes Un- easiness in Unionist Circles—Mc- Carthy's Statement to Await the Result of the Struggle With the Peers.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Lord Salisbury's skirting of the issue of formal revision for the reform of the House of Lords, while admitting that a reconstruction of that body is desirable, is the theme of general regret on the part of the Conservative press. The explanation of the ex- pected reticence is seen in the fact that his colleagues as to an alternative programme. Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour has promised to address the Conservative of Newcastle on November 13, if his health will permit. The unanimity of demand of the party that he give some idea of their leaders' policy with regard to the House of Lords is complete and so well grounded that Mr. Balfour must be prepared to fight to the end for all the privileges of the peers.

Among the Unionists several propo- sitions are being debated, including one for the appointment of a selection committee to select from the House of Lords the members to be retained in the House of Lords. The project of Lord Salisbury or leave the country convinced that the Tories are prepared to fight to the end for all the privileges of the peers.

His first attempt to give some idea of their leaders' policy with regard to the House of Lords is complete and so well grounded that Mr. Balfour must be prepared to fight to the end for all the privileges of the peers.

MERCER'S LIFE ENDED.

Quebec's Erstwhile Foremost Statesman Passes Away.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—Honore Mercier died yesterday morning at 8:45. The end had been expected any time during the preceding twenty-four hours, and hope of recovery had been given up weeks ago. The news that he had first felt seriously ill on the 14th of August last. It had been felt that he lay on his death bed.

Honore Mercier was born at St. Athanas, Quebec, on October 15, 1840. He was educated at the college of the Jesuit Fathers in Montreal; studied for the bar and in an extra Gazette.

Alexander III, Czar of all the Russias, succeeded to the throne on the murder of his father by nihilist conspirators on March 18, 1881, was born March 10, 1844. For some time after his elevation to the throne he seldom appeared in public, but lived in the closest retirement in Gatchina, being in constant dread of the machinations of the secret societies of socialists. His coronation took place at Moscow, on May 27, 1882. He married, in 1882, Mary Fedorovna (formerly Mary Sophia Frederica Dugan), daughter of Christian IX, King of Denmark, and sister of the Princess of Wales and King of Greece. The principal concern of the Czar was to put down the revolution, to develop the military power of Russia, to organize her Asiatic and Caucasian provinces and to keep a steady eye on Constantinople.

From the beginning of his reign periodical attempts upon his life were made by the nihilists. Twice officers in his own army tried to shoot him. In 1888 he and his family narrowly escaped death in a railway accident near Borki. The train was thrown from the track and many passengers were killed, but the Imperial party were hardly injured. The derailling of the train was supposed to be the work of nihilists. He died of a heart attack on Friday morning, Nov. 3, 1894, at the age of 54. He was buried in the Imperial family vault in the St. Isaac's Cathedral in St. Petersburg.

The Czar was deeply religious. He was under the influence of such bishops as Pobedonostsev, attorney general of the Holy Synod, and his group, and persecuted the Jews, Catholics and German Lutherans in Russia without cessation or mercy.

The Czar left five children, the Czar, Nicholas, 37 years of age; the Grand Duke George, now ill in the South of Russia; the Grand Duke, Alex. and Olga, and the Grand Duke Michael, a boy in his teens. In the ordinary course of events, the Crown Prince, Nicholas, would succeed to the throne. In view of his physical weakness, and other peculiarities there has been much talk of a regency.

FOUNDED A MISSING WOMAN.

Her Clothes the Only Thing By Which She Could Be Identified.

CAYUGA, Ont., Nov. 2.—Mrs. J. Lint, wife of Mr. Lint, a well-known farmer, arrived from her home in the village of Kohler on Monday last. Search was immediately made for the missing woman. The clothes which she had worn when she was last seen were found wandering through the country, and it was immediately sent to her family that she had been found.

Yesterday three young men, out hunting in Mr. Leggett's bush about a mile from Kohler, found the body of Mrs. Lint. There was nothing of the body left but the dry bones, and the only thing left to show that it was the remains of Mrs. Lint was the clothes she was wearing when she was last seen.

James Thompson, of Cayuga, drove out yesterday afternoon and viewed the remains. He said that an impostor was not possible. Previous to her death she would have been for some time in a melancholy state.

Burglary at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, Nov. 1.—The house of Mr. J. C. Marston, principal of the Collegiate Institute, was burgled last night. Mr. Marston, who is a well-known farmer, arrived from his home in the village of Kohler on Monday last. Search was immediately made for the missing woman.
