

ON THE CULTURE OF WHEAT.

Before the present number reaches our subscribers, the important operation of sowing wheat, in most parts of the Province, will have made considerable advancement.

It is a fact, confirmed by every year's experience, that the wheat crop in this country is very uncertain, and its precariousness of late would appear to be increasing.

There is but one way, and that so plain as to be apparent to the most superficial observer, to avoid such evolutions, such, rice, and indeed every kind of weed, injurious to wheat—thorough cultivation of the land and careful selection and preparation of the seed.

The questions of the fly, rust, &c., are far more complicated and difficult. In their practical solution are involved some of the most difficult investigations of the naturalist.

"Hitherto, we believe, speculators on mind and matter have been kept too much in a state of ignorance by the narrowness of the subject by a priori dogmas on the constitution of the human mind, and neglected the light which physiological discoveries are calculated to throw upon physical phenomena.

This is all very well; but what appears remarkable is that this writer advances, as a new idea, that which the phrenologists, for half a century, have been laboring to impress upon the public mind. He must have been, either entirely ignorant of the nature of phrenological studies, or too disposed to give the phrenologists credit for those discoveries which are peculiarly their own.

The above extract, however, contains an important admission in regard to the mind of man; it shows that the faculties of the human mind are governed by the laws of physiology, and that inferior creatures; for if it did not admit this, how could our knowledge of the human mind be enlarged by the study of comparative psychology?

The part here stated had suffered severely from winter-killing, while the drilled portion had upon the whole sufficiency of plant, equally distributed, although less seed by a peck per acre had been used.

In drawing these remarks to a close, we would impress on the minds of our agricultural readers the necessity of effecting surface drainage on their fall wheat lands. Indeed this is necessary upon all portions of the farm, particularly on retentive soils; but for winter wheat it is absolutely indispensable.

The part here stated had suffered severely from winter-killing, while the drilled portion had upon the whole sufficiency of plant, equally distributed, although less seed by a peck per acre had been used.

AGRICULTURAL SHOW.—The New York State fair, held last week at Buffalo, was a splendid success. We are informed that upwards of 100,000 persons were present on the occasion.

In sick-see there is no hand like a woman's hand—no heart like a woman's heart—no eye so entrancing—no hope so fervent. Woman by a sick man's couch is divinely represented.

FROM THE MONTREAL TRANSCRIPT. PIRENOLOGY.—No. VII.

The grand point of distinction between the philosophy of ancient and modern times consists in the fact, that in the former science began and ended in theory—in the latter, no theory is admissible, unless it is shown to be of some practical utility.

It appears that the Brazilian steam frigate was out on a pleasure excursion. She had on board the Prince de Joinville, with his lady, and suite, the Duke and Duchess D'Anjou, the Brazilian Minister, the Chevalier de Libano, Admiral Graueuil and daughters, and other distinguished persons.

The steamer's last life by suffocation, in attempting to save the gunpowder, of which there was 25 pounds in the cabin. It afterwards exploded, but as it was loose, it is believed that no damage was done by the explosion.

The Alfonso landed 160 passengers. A noble fellow, a seaman, from the New World, stuck to the hull of the unucky ship till every soul had left it.

"What are you doing?"—What are you doing, young man? Your hands appear never to be soiled, and your bosom is without a speck or wrinkle.

The above extract, however, contains an important admission in regard to the mind of man; it shows that the faculties of the human mind are governed by the laws of physiology, and that inferior creatures; for if it did not admit this, how could our knowledge of the human mind be enlarged by the study of comparative psychology?

THE BURNING OF THE "OCEAN MONARCH."

This vessel sailed from Liverpool on Thursday the 25th ult., with 380 souls on board. She was a packet ship bound to Boston, of 1300 ton burthen.

On reaching Orms Head it was discovered that one of the passengers had taken fire in the ventilator, and the fire immediately broke out, orders to have it extinguished and the person brought to him.

MEANS MORE MAY BE BITTEN, BUT THE EFFECTS HAVE NOT APPEARED. It is not known whether any dogs have been bitten; but it is supposed that some have; if so, they get running at large, a much greater amount of mischief may yet be done.

The Crown Land Office has desired a correction to be made in their advertisements respecting the price of lands offered for sale—the price being eight shillings instead of four shillings, as erroneously stated in some of the first insertions.—Globe.

FROM THE DUNDAS WARDER. WORSE THAN THE CHOLEERA!

The acutely sensitive men are to the consequences likely to arise from any other description of evil, in that they daily stare them in the face. Intemperance is acknowledged to have destroyed the peace of more families, ruined the prospects in life of more young men, and kept forever from the theatre of action more immortal beings, than all the wars, plagues, and public intemperance which have befallen our race.

It is a fact, confirmed by every year's experience, that the wheat crop in this country is very uncertain, and its precariousness of late would appear to be increasing.

There is but one way, and that so plain as to be apparent to the most superficial observer, to avoid such evolutions, such, rice, and indeed every kind of weed, injurious to wheat—thorough cultivation of the land and careful selection and preparation of the seed.

The questions of the fly, rust, &c., are far more complicated and difficult. In their practical solution are involved some of the most difficult investigations of the naturalist.

"Hitherto, we believe, speculators on mind and matter have been kept too much in a state of ignorance by the narrowness of the subject by a priori dogmas on the constitution of the human mind, and neglected the light which physiological discoveries are calculated to throw upon physical phenomena.

This is all very well; but what appears remarkable is that this writer advances, as a new idea, that which the phrenologists, for half a century, have been laboring to impress upon the public mind. He must have been, either entirely ignorant of the nature of phrenological studies, or too disposed to give the phrenologists credit for those discoveries which are peculiarly their own.

The above extract, however, contains an important admission in regard to the mind of man; it shows that the faculties of the human mind are governed by the laws of physiology, and that inferior creatures; for if it did not admit this, how could our knowledge of the human mind be enlarged by the study of comparative psychology?

SPEEDY JUSTICE.

On last Saturday night, at Manderville, the old jail, built by Pontiac, an Indian murdered an Indian, by stabbing him with a large knife. A son of the murdered man immediately gave information to two of the tribe, and they took the offender into custody.

At the first shot death was not produced, the second shot also failed, but the third, fired by the stonewall volunteer, fell into his grave, and covered with earth as he lay, and the stonewall volunteer delivered him to the civil authorities of Croyington to obtain his final discharge as an innocent man.

MEANS MORE MAY BE BITTEN, BUT THE EFFECTS HAVE NOT APPEARED. It is not known whether any dogs have been bitten; but it is supposed that some have; if so, they get running at large, a much greater amount of mischief may yet be done.

The Crown Land Office has desired a correction to be made in their advertisements respecting the price of lands offered for sale—the price being eight shillings instead of four shillings, as erroneously stated in some of the first insertions.—Globe.

A traveller, just returned from the back settlements of America, states that firewood may be obtained in abundance by only "axing" for it.

COLLEGE EDUCATION.—There is a talk of reform in the Collegiate Institutions of England—probably not before it is needed.

Great men come out of Oxford and Cambridge, not in consequence, but in spite of the vicious education there pursued. Be that as it may, the following questions and answers are smart enough; though a slight acquaintance with college slang would help one to appreciate them.

Q. What is knowledge? A. A thing to be examined by. Q. What is the beginning of knowledge? A. A private tutor. Q. What is the end of knowledge? A. A fellowship.

Q. What must those do who would show knowledge? A. Get up subjects, and write them out. Q. What is getting up a subject? A. Learning to write it out. Q. What is writing out a subject? A. Showing that you have it up.

Q. Why is your name each term by the other? A. Because neither has reference to anything but the other. Q. How do you reply to those who insist upon habits to be formed by the mode of getting knowledge? A. Poo!; poo!

NOVEL EXPERIMENT.—Last week, Cornwall was visited by a large and commodious barge, from Montreal, having on board a complete mercantile establishment.

AN UNUSUAL OCCUPANT OF A BEAR TRAP.—For some time back, Mr. Young, distiller, of Williamsburgh, was greatly surprised to find that a quantity of his high wines was disappearing in a most mysterious manner.

TRUE VIRTUE.—When I set before me true-virtue, all the distinctions on which mortals pride themselves, as wealth, power, worldly honor, mean to outward forms are beggary elements.

WHO DOES THE HOUSE OF COMMONS REPRESENT?—Amongst its members are upwards of 250 persons immediately or remotely related to the Peers of the Realm; 25 Bishops, 7 Bishops, 21 Viscounts, 33 Lords, 25 Barons, 47 Knights, 37 Baronets, 56 Birmonts, 9 Knights, 9 Lord Lieutenants, 74 Deputy and Vice Lieutenants, 33 Magistrates, 63 Placemen, 180 patrons of Church livings, 3 Admirals, 3 Lieutenants-General, 3 Major Generals, 24 Colonels, 16 Majors, 45 Captains, 21 Lieutenants, and 4 Coronets.

INVASION OF CANADA.—The New York Star observes:—"A most intelligent and influential patriot, with whom we have conversed on the condition of the British American Provinces, says that any fox hunt in those regions for the purpose of overthrowing the present Government, can only prove a waste of powder and shot, if not a loss of life to all engaged in it."

WE ARE BUT POOR PARTY POLITICIANS, and care too little for any party name to pick holes in their coats, or defend them when in the wrong. We will pursue our course right on, without caring a brass farthing for either of their houses, and for that reason we feel strongly inclined just now to join issue with the majority of our conservative brethren on the question of Mr. Stuart's non-appointment to office.

THE CROWN LAND OFFICE has desired a correction to be made in their advertisements respecting the price of lands offered for sale—the price being eight shillings instead of four shillings, as erroneously stated in some of the first insertions.—Globe.

A traveller, just returned from the back settlements of America, states that firewood may be obtained in abundance by only "axing" for it.

INCUMBENTS WHO HAVE FAITHFULLY PERFORMED THE DUTIES OF THEIR OFFICE; BUT TO ASK THEM TO SANCTION THE JOBS OF THEIR PREDECESSORS IS GOING, WE THINK, A LITTLE TOO FAR.—Transcript.

A fine little girl, aged 5 years, daughter of Mr. Timothy Rogers, was burned to death a few days ago near Bradford, West Guelphburgh, by her clothes catching fire. Her parents were both out of the house at the time, and although she succeeded in quenching the fire in a few minutes, yet, the injuries were so great that she died in a few hours.—Globe.

HURON SIGNAL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1848.

THE BUILDING SOCIETY.

We have always regarded this institution as a provident or economical society, instituted for the benefit of those who are struggling with pecuniary difficulties; and as a means of enabling poor men to accomplish, on the principle of co-operation, what they could not do by individual exertion.

When legal advice is required, which must be seldom, then it can be procured and paid for, and the Society will have the liberty of dividing its patronage among the different members of the legal profession who may be connected with it, or employing the Solicitor whose superior character entitles him to a superior claim.

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

INCUMBENTS WHO HAVE FAITHFULLY PERFORMED THE DUTIES OF THEIR OFFICE; BUT TO ASK THEM TO SANCTION THE JOBS OF THEIR PREDECESSORS IS GOING, WE THINK, A LITTLE TOO FAR.—Transcript.

A fine little girl, aged 5 years, daughter of Mr. Timothy Rogers, was burned to death a few days ago near Bradford, West Guelphburgh, by her clothes catching fire. Her parents were both out of the house at the time, and although she succeeded in quenching the fire in a few minutes, yet, the injuries were so great that she died in a few hours.—Globe.

HURON SIGNAL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1848.

THE BUILDING SOCIETY.

We have always regarded this institution as a provident or economical society, instituted for the benefit of those who are struggling with pecuniary difficulties; and as a means of enabling poor men to accomplish, on the principle of co-operation, what they could not do by individual exertion.

When legal advice is required, which must be seldom, then it can be procured and paid for, and the Society will have the liberty of dividing its patronage among the different members of the legal profession who may be connected with it, or employing the Solicitor whose superior character entitles him to a superior claim.

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

INCUMBENTS WHO HAVE FAITHFULLY PERFORMED THE DUTIES OF THEIR OFFICE; BUT TO ASK THEM TO SANCTION THE JOBS OF THEIR PREDECESSORS IS GOING, WE THINK, A LITTLE TOO FAR.—Transcript.

A fine little girl, aged 5 years, daughter of Mr. Timothy Rogers, was burned to death a few days ago near Bradford, West Guelphburgh, by her clothes catching fire. Her parents were both out of the house at the time, and although she succeeded in quenching the fire in a few minutes, yet, the injuries were so great that she died in a few hours.—Globe.

HURON SIGNAL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1848.

THE BUILDING SOCIETY.

We have always regarded this institution as a provident or economical society, instituted for the benefit of those who are struggling with pecuniary difficulties; and as a means of enabling poor men to accomplish, on the principle of co-operation, what they could not do by individual exertion.

When legal advice is required, which must be seldom, then it can be procured and paid for, and the Society will have the liberty of dividing its patronage among the different members of the legal profession who may be connected with it, or employing the Solicitor whose superior character entitles him to a superior claim.

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn scroll called forth a world of immortals of the past, as though I lived in childhood's mists—con and some who even I endowed me with friend all before me, and I and I gaze and think light on the distant gay many who were once dead beneath the hoary Scotch churchyard. There is the shadow of the pale rales that fence a cypress gloom upon its white slabs of wood or perforated as the frail and bring again the dead grown so wicked, or so return no more to mingled strange tales of the All, all, is tranquil. Small rustic of the sickening motion of the its sleep by my untiring gaze who marked, with more years the wicket prayerful saint; the prof of glorious hank who liveth the faith that mankind seeking scornful God and his own dignity; the mist of tears; the lovely virgin adorned and only a gleaming lightning mild death. All moulder in shrouds or coffins that ends our knowledge; he All that we know of frail

There is a solemn