Greek Cabinet Guilty of Fraud.

Gounaris Government Has Brought on Discredit.

Milan, July 26.—A violent attack on the Government by Venizelos is considered in Italy to mark a new phase of the Greek situation. The Gounaris Cabinet, he declared, had done everything to prevent the nation giving expression to its will, had stopped the constitutional life of the country and had used the name of the King, but the nation had nevertheless broken through all the obstacles by which it had been neutralized.

"The danger in the situation lies in the fact that the Government, without authority, has plunged into discord," continued Venizelos. "This caused me to decide to return to public life. In vain the present Government, claiming to have the confidence of the King, but not that of the people, has tried to falsify the elections."

"I hope that the King's restoration to health will soon put an end to all the rumors which accuse the Government of planning a coup d'état, that of the dissolution of Parliament before it even meets."

"There is not the slightest doubt that the internal situation in Greece is rapidly approaching a crisis of the most dangerous kind. The notorious Baron von Schneck is at the head of the pro-German agitation, and his hundreds of agents are working night and day to oppose the return of Venizelos to power and keep active the shipping of contraband into Turkey by Greek vessels and business houses. He also is expending immense sums to subsidize the press, which is trying to create friction on account of the activity of warships in suppressing contraband."

If any further effort is made to adjourn the meeting of the Chamber a critical situation will be created."

WILLIEWAUGHTS.

When corks are popping a n d youths are yawning a lachrymose song, are graybeard's relics, old-worn alecks, remark, "They're starting wrong." The voices aucous that jeer and mock us, and sing of joy to-day, will wail in sorrow, some dark to-morrow, for chances thrown away. For win's a mocker, a plexus shocker, that ruins nerves and brain, it sets heads aching, and hearts a-breaking, and fills your bones with pain. Strong drink is raging, and when you're aging, you realize this truth; oaths being handy, you curse the brandy and gin you drank in youth. Old age discloses emurpured noses, and hands that shake and twitch and manifest grooches, and midnight couches in alley or in ditch. The gilded fellows whom wassail mellow in gilded booze saloon, some day may grovel in squalid hovel, and pray for just one prune. Where are the singers, the gay bundlingers, who with me drank and spilted. In countless numbers they have their stumbers out in the Potter's Field. The fellows gifted, who nightly lifted the glass, where folly died, who might have risen—but died in prison with none to close their eyes!

THE FISHERY.
The Prospero reports very little improvement in the northern fishery. North of Fogo very little has been done during the last two weeks. Some of the traps have done well, but the majority have very small catches to date, and the prospects are not at all encouraging. In many of the places the hook and line fishermen are doing fairly well when weather permits them to get to the grounds. From Fogo south practically all the traps were damaged by the recent storm, and very few of them will be able to be used again this season. At King's Cove and adjacent settlements the damage done to traps was not quite so extensive and many of them will be re-set as the prospects are somewhat encouraging. Further south the hook and line men are considerably hampered in their operations through a general scarcity of bait.

Cure Guaranteed

Entire Prohibition.

Appeal by Temperance Association.
A manifesto has been issued by the Scottish Permissive Bill and Temperance Association, in which it is said: "The Defence of the Realm Amendment No. 3 Act has become law, but the problem of the liquor traffic in relation to the war remains unsolved. The Executive of the Scottish Permissive Bill and Temperance Association believe that the nation as a whole should reconsider its position and responsibilities with reference to the deadly menace which the liquor traffic has become to the safety of the country in this time of national crisis."

The recent legislation does not meet the deplorable situation revealed by the Government White Paper, and practically ignores the strong representations and demands made by employers of labour engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war and engaged in work for the Admiralty. The Executive reaffirm their former declaration that nothing short of the entire prohibition of the sale of alcoholic liquor will save the nation in this life and death struggle from the paralyzing effects of excessive drinking. It has been abundantly proved that even in times of peace the nation cannot afford the enormous waste of money and efficiency entailed by the drink traffic. To continue these under present conditions is to commit national suicide.

If the situation is what the Government White Paper, Sir John Jellicoe, Sir John French, and the employers of labour declare it to be, then it is for you to declare emphatically that you will no longer tolerate anything that interferes with the full efficiency of the men at the front and of those at home in furnishing the necessary means of offence and defence; that you are not, to quote Sir John French, going "to quail before a lot of enraged distillers and publicans," and that you will no longer permit the liquor traffic to endanger the national existence.—Weekly Scotsman, June 12.

Grand Reception to S. A. Commissioner.

On Saturday night Commissioner Richards, S.A., was given a hearty reception at the Casino by the local and visiting officers.

Addresses were given by Eugene Marshall of the work of the Women's Social Branch; Adj. (Mrs.) Simmonds, on behalf of the Women Officers and by Adj. Hiscock representing the men. Brigadier Morehen then introduced the Commissioner who spoke eloquently and at some length on the subject "Jonathan and his armour bearer," dealing mainly with the necessity of co-operation on the part of all, so that the very best results might be obtained from the energy expended in Army work.

At 11 a.m. yesterday a public house meeting was held when the Citadel was again crowded. The address by the Commissioner was very inspiring, and dealt with Purity of Life, the need of the formation of such character as would influence and assist those met with in the everyday world to rise to a higher and better life, being clearly pointed out.

GIVE IT A TRIAL.

for Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda, who lectured at the Casino Theatre yesterday afternoon. The meeting was presided over by His Excellency the Governor, and with him on the platform were several members of the city churches. The service opened with a hymn followed by prayer led by the Rev. W. H. Thomas, Pastor of the Congregational Church. His Excellency who was introduced by Brigadier Morehen, then addressed the large gathering, expressing his admiration of the good work done by the army, and referred to the founder, the late lamented General William Booth. He spoke of the great good accomplished by great leaders of religious thought right down the ages, and particularly of the human side of the army's work in teaching the brotherhood of man. Commissioner Richards then followed with a lengthy address which was listened to with rapt attention by all present. His stories were most appropriate and were well told, and the end of the course came all too soon. Commissioner Richards is a native of Wales, and had been years connected with active work in the army. He has children all of whom are officers of rank in the army. One son was for six years in Berlin and only recently escaped from that city. In referring to the war, the Commissioner convinced the audience that his patriotism was no less ardent than his zeal for the Glory of God. At the close of the address, Hon. J. Robinson proposed, and Hon. R. Watson seconded a vote of thanks to His Excellency the Governor for presiding and it was accorded by acclamation. During the afternoon the band rendered some pleasing selections, and Brigadier Abdy gave a solo which was very much appreciated.

At last evening's meeting in the Casino theatre the attendance was even larger than in the afternoon many extra seats having to be provided. Fully 100 officers and band members were on the platform. The usual exercises were gone through and the Commissioner preached, his remarks being heard with closest attention by all. It was estimated that almost 1,400 persons were present.

Eton College Cadets.

General's Advice to Future Officers.

Lieut.-General Sir W. Pitt Rivers Campbell, General Officer Commanding Southern Command, inspected the Eton College Officers Training Corps on Saturday. The corps paraded nearly 600 strong, under Lieut.-Colonel F. E. Robeson, and was inspected in various forms of drill, outpost duty, and trench-digging.

Addressing the lads at the close of the inspection, General Campbell said that his visit brought back recollections of 42 years ago, when he wore the same uniform. He remembered how proud he was when he walked out of his tutor's house with the badge of Lance-Corporal. The Provost, Dr. Warre, was captain of the company he belonged to, and the present Headmaster (Dr. Lyttelton) was a sergeant in the corps. The drill he had seen that day was quite good, the march past was fair, and the handling of arms better than he expected. No doubt many of them would become officers later on. The first thing they should remember was to keep in close touch with their men; see to their food, and the fitting of their boots, and do everything they could to conduce to their comfort. If it came to digging, let them take a share in it themselves. He advised them not to try to go into the army too young. At the beginning of the war they had a lot of fellows coming up who were only 17, but at that age they could not stand the tremendous strain of the hard work, trials, and privations they would have to go through. It was better to wait until they were 18 or 19.

The corps will go into camp on July 27, with Winchester, Marlborough, Charterhouse and Malvern.—Times, July 19.

Training Horses for the War.

France Has 200,000 War Horses.

It is hard to realize what an important part horses play in war, for we are so accustomed to motors in every way, that we think the war horse is like the cab horse, almost extinct.

The war footing of horses is just over 200,000 for Germany, the same number for France, 100,000 for Austria and Great Britain, and over 600,000 for Russia.

A horse, like a man, has to be specially trained. It is the cavalryman's other self, as it were, and unless both are thoroughly trained then the whole cannot work properly together.

The training of man and horse is seen at its best at the great French Cavalry School at Saumur. Here come all the smart French lieutenants to learn horse-riding, veterinary work, and at least something about horse-shoeing and saddle-making.

There is an immense practice ground there, and there can be seen dragoons and horses galloping, leaping hurdles and cavalrymen mounting and dismounting their horses at full speed.

The French cavalry recruit has over a hundred different lessons before he is considered fit to ride his horse. The animal is taught to swim rivers, and it must be able to stand all sorts of gun reports, from the crack of a service revolver, to the roar of a great battery of artillery.

After this it is taught to gallop up to a line of infantry blazing away with their rifles, loaded, of course, in practice, with blank cartridge. When it goes into battle, therefore, the animal is the roar of the guns without any difficulty.

It is a curious thing that horses stand the roar and flash and smoke of ordinary powder better than the roar and flash from smokeless powder, though why has not been explained.
