FOREIGN PRESS OPINION

AMERICAN.

There can be no doubt at all that commercial aviation is being accepted in England as a practical proposition when on the window of a fashionable milliner in Oxford Street, could be seen on September 4, prominently displayed, the announcement: "Madame—left for Paris to-day in a Handley-Page." The musical profession, too, has not been slow in making use of the way of the air to keep appointments in a minimum of time. A Paris singer had an important engagement to keep at La Havre and, having lost her train, she appealed to the Air Transport people and got carried to her destination for a relatively moderate sum. An Italian singer, also, in somewhat similar circumstances, took to the air in order to reach Paris at a given time. It is evident that the public, given the chance, will not need much urging to exchange packed, slow trains and uncertain boats for the celerity of an air machine offering security and rapidity. — Christian Science Monitor.

A Good Scheme.
The French Association of Leather Merchants and Bootmakers has made an interesting proposal to M. Loucheur, Minister of Reconstruction, with a view to reducing the present high price of footwear. They propose that he shall hand over the commissariat stock of leather, which they say will be sufficient to make a million pairs of shoes, which they undertake to place on the market at eight dollars, as the equal of what is now held at the shops for twelve dollars. M. Loucheur has accepted the proposal. Why not try the plan here in Canada?—St. John Telegraph.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The poems of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, whose death is announced at her home in Brantford, Conn., enjoyed great popularity for many years both on this continent and in England. Ten years ago T. P.'s Weekly noticed in a few days no less than seven quotations from her work in the London daily papers. Most of her poems, however, were essentially commonplace, and not destined to survive, and it is probably for this reason that her name appears in only two out of a dozen standard books of quotations. Among these quotations are the well-known lines from "Solitude":

"Laugh and the world laughs with you;
Weep and you weep alone;

crages. Especially emphatic is the refusal of the electors to return to the conditions which existed previous to the passage of the Ontario Temperance Act. In regard to the modified facilities suggested in the three questions placed on the ballot the pronouncements, though definite, are successively less emphatic. Next to the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act the proposal to permit the sale of two and a half per cent. beer in standard hotels in local municipalities comes in for the strongest condemnation, while the largest proportion of favorable votes goes to the proposal to sell spirituous and malt liquors through government agencies. But the majority adverse to any of the forms of distribution of liquor is in every case overwhelming. Prohibition sentiment is beyond all cavil in the ascendant in Ontario.

It is hardly to be doubted that a similar result would attend a referendum on the liquor question in all the dry provinces of the Dominion. Frequently it has been suggested that with the war over there would be a reaction against prohibition at least to the extent of permitting the sale of beer and light wines. For this there appears to be no real ground. It is natural that such a proposition should receive a larger measure of support than the more complete prohibition now obtaining. But it is evident that the reaction, if any, has not affected even the comparatively small number of electors required to create a majority in its favor. From the result of the Ontario referendum the liquor interests can derive no hope of any reversal of prohibition sentiment. On the contrary, the people are determined to maintain it; and this at a time when many other habits of thought have clearly been broken. It now remains for the Dominion Government to take such action as will secure that each province can make effective its desire in regard to prohibition or to such limited sale of intoxicants as may from time to time be permitted. — From the Manitoba Free Press.

The Passing of the Red Trousers.
The red trousers of the French army are to be no more. There is a political and economical tragedy about it with which very few people are familiar. The originator of the red trousers was Napoleon, who was prompted in his "reform" by a desire to help the native cultivation of mad. der root—that time and for many centuries previously the chief source of red color throughout the world—against the Dutch and Italian rivals. As a result the industry expanded considerably, and some fifty years ago was worth nearly £2,000,000 per annum. But then came the Graeher-Liebermann discovery of the alizarine dyes, and in less than ten years, between 1870 and 1878, the production of madder root in France shrunk from 25,000 to 500 tons, and then disappeared. This was a great German victory. Nevertheless the army trousers continued to be dyed red, only this time the dyes had to be imported from Germany. This was certainly a great humiliation for the French, but it evidently required a great war to put an end to it.—Manchester Guardian.

INDIGESTION CAN'T STAY

Stomach Pain, Sourness, Gases, and Acidity ended with
"Pape's Diapiesin"

Out-of-order stomachs feel fine at once! When meals don't fit and you belch gas, acids and undigested food. When you feel indigestion, pain, lumps of distress in stomach, heartburn or headache. Here is instant relief.

Just as soon as you eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapiesin all the dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach distress caused by acidity will end. These pleasant, harmless tablets of Pape's Diapiesin always put sick, upset, acid stomachs in order at once and they cost so little at drug stores.

Too Big for Her Boots!

HAS WAR-TIME LUXURY SPOILT THE ORDINARY GIRL?

At twenty-six John Henry has become a philosopher. He declares that the modern girl is the cause.

John Henry doesn't like the modern girl. "It's sickening," he says, "the way girls reckon up what they'll be able to get out of a fellow before they will even be pals. No, I shall never marry. The modern girl wouldn't have me. She's looking for too much. She's too big for her shoes."

Edith was a quiet suburban girl before the war, content if she got a little tennis in the summer and a few dances in the winter. Father paid her dress bills, which were controlled by mother, and Edith felt passing rich on a weekly half-crown or so as pocket-money. The idea of settling down in a dear little house

St. John Man Has Gained 26 Pounds By Taking Tanlac

Finds Tanlac to be Just What He Had Been Needing for Fifteen Years.

"Yes, Sir, I have gained twenty-six pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and I am in such fine condition that I can do as hard a day's work as any man," was the statement made to a Tanlac representative recently by Charles Allen, who lives at 301 Union Street, St. John, N.B.

"My health broke down while I was serving in the Boer War," continued Mr. Allen, "and since that time my condition has been getting worse all the time. For the past nine years my stomach has been in an awful fix and no matter what I would eat I was sure to suffer agony afterwards. Every night that came was misery for me for I couldn't sleep but would roll and tumble till time to get up. I was so nervous and when any one spoke to me I would almost jump out of my chair. Finally I could go no longer, so I gave up my work and started to the country to take a long rest. "But before I left I decided to buy a bottle of Tanlac and take it with me, as I had heard and read so much about it. I went on to the country and began to take my Tanlac, and I want to tell you I felt so much better when I finished my first bottle that I was determined to have some more and I walked two miles and got it. It has been some time now since I finished my last bottle but I am feeling even finer to-day than I did then for I am heavier and stronger, and my work is a pleasure to me. My nerves are steady and every night that comes I can sleep as sound as a child and I get my mornings feeling fine. My appetite is so good that I am almost ashamed of the way I eat, and everything I eat digests perfectly, and I never have the least pain in my stomach. Tanlac has proved to be just the thing I have been needing for over fifteen years, and a medicine that can do what it has done for me certainly deserves every bit of the praise I can give it." Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative. advt.

with John Henry, who earned four pounds a week, and had a small income of one hundred a year as well, pleased Edith in these days. It doesn't please her now.

She has just told John Henry that would be existence, but nothing more. She says she wouldn't dream of contemplating it. And John Henry feels raw in consequences.

The war spoilt Edith, as it spoilt lots of girls. Officer friends took her about, she went to restaurants she'd never dreamed of entering, she sat in stalls at the theatre, travelled in first-class carriages, ate expensive chocolates, dashed about in taxis instead of the homely "bus, went to smart dances "up West" instead of "local hops," and generally lived in a world above her station for a time.

Sometimes she did "war work," and used the salary in supplementing the things father paid for. Anyhow, she dressed very well, and looked the part she played.

But it has made her discontented. She hates the thought of poverty and making ends meet. She won't marry a poor man, she says. She has indeed become too big for her shoes.

And young men like John Henry are feeling very disgusted with her. A word in their ears. Leave Miss Too-Big-For-Her-Shoes alone. There are other girls. Let her wait for her millionaire—or "the shelf."

Deep Snow on the Topsails.

Four feet of snow on the Topsails and vicinity has been reported by train hands who came across country on the express that arrived in the city yesterday morning. During Friday and Saturday a fierce N. E. snow storm raged along the Western section of the railway. Coming up so suddenly, the trains were caught without snow-plows, and as a result are making but slow progress, although as yet no reports of hold-ups have been reported. It was raining along the line last night and the snow was given a deep cutting.

SOME NEW WORDS

There are certain words I would like very much to see added to the English language. Perhaps not having quite so many struggles with that medium of expression you do not feel so keenly as I the defects I am about to mention, but I am sure you must have nibbled your pen over some of them.

If a fairy godmother of language were to grant me three new words this would be my first wish. I want a word which means "the" or "she," another which means "his" or "her," and a third which means "him" or "her."

Some Synonyms For "Said."

Next, I would like some simple synonyms for "said." True, there are words that approximately take its place—"to utter," "to tell," "to declare"—but if you analyze these carefully, you will find that they have more color to them than "say" and cannot be fitted in where you want a perfectly colorless word. Don't you get deathly sick when you are reading a dialogue in a story, of the eternal repetition of "he said," "she said," "he said," "she said"? Well, the author gets quite as sick of it for this is one of his worst problems in the mechanics of writing. Some authors solve it by leaving out the "he said" and "she said." That is good if not continued
