You Owe Yourself this dainty habit.

Fight the film on teeth.

You men and women owe to yourself prettier, cleaner teeth. Teeth free from dingy film. Millions have learned the way to attain them. If you don't know it, please try it now.

Film is unclean

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It resists the tooth brush, and much of it clings and stays. Soon it becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That's why countless teeth are clouded more or less.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Under old methods, very few people, young or older, escaped these film-caused troubles.

These facts led dental science to seek for film combatants. Eventually two were found. One dissintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent dissintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Pepsodent
The New-Day Dentifrice

Now advised by leading dentists the world over.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists the world over began to advise this method. Now careful people of some 50 nations are employing it every day.

It brings many new effects

Pepsodent does other things which research proved essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva—there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva—there to digest starch deposits.

Soapy tooth pastes reduce these great protective agents. Pepsodent gives them manifold power.

Thus the use of Pepsodent brings astonishing results. They are quick and convincing. You will not, when you know them, ever go without them.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will realize then how much this method means to you and yours. Cut out coupon now.

Free Trade With the West Indies

(By HARRY J. CROWE)

"We need an overseas market and the most convenient to the Maritime Provinces and all Canada is the British West Indies. Give us a free trade treaty instead of a 25 per cent. and 10 per cent. preference, abolish the standard which gives the five Canadian sugar refineries such a monopoly that the British West Indies cannot ship sugar here at a profit and industries are prevented from being developed, which would be of more value to Canada than the refining of sugar," said Harry J. Crowe, of St. John's, Newfoundland, and Toronto, who is the foremost exponent of closer trade and political union between the British West Indies and the Dominion of Canada, when speaking to a reporter of The Morning Chronicle at the Halifax Hotel recently.

Some of the features in the present very unsatisfactory trade relations which Canada has with the West Indies and which, Mr. Crowe contends, are "strangling," that trade this country has with the Islands, and stand as the greatest obstacles to future development were: Importation of West India products through the United States owing to lack of proper transportation; payment of a heavy toll as a consequence to the middlemen of that country; Canada's wrong interpretation of the trade treaty, particularly with respect to the importation of sugar which gives "Canadian refineries almost a strangle hold upon the producer and also the consumer."

Rivalry in the Tropics

"There is no country having greater advantages to offer Canada for a free interchange of commerce than the British West Indies," declared this exponent of the southern trade, for said he, "the future rivalry of the larger nations of the world will be in tropical territory, since in tropical zones is produced the raw material required by the temperate zone nations."

"The former are required to buy practically all their manufactured goods they use as well as the agricultural products of our northern climates," Mr. Crowe said.

"I have seen the recent interview given your paper by H. J. Logan, M.P., and his conclusions, which really mean, wake up Canada, are sound and timely," Mr. Crowe observed, and then he emphatically declared with reference to Nova Scotia, "that her geographical position and great natural resources of the sea, forests, fields and mines, would place her in a position to reap a greater benefit from a free trade treaty with the British West Indies than any other part of Canada."

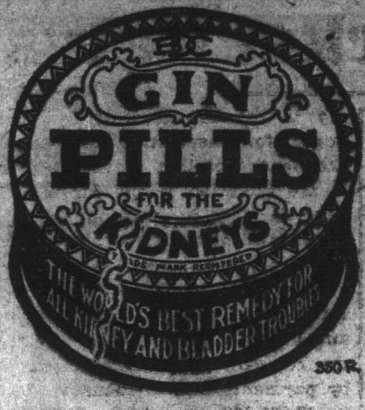

"As vast as the resources of Canada are, we will never be complete without tropical territory. We have no Louisiana, Philippines, West Indies, Florida, Hawaii, Porto Rico, like our great southern neighbor. Lacking tropical possessions we can never develop our full potentialities. There is only one portion of the tropics accessible to Canada, namely, the British West Indies, which are larger than the Dominion of New Zealand, with double its population. Their strategic position, lying as they do across the trade routes between North and South America and the Panama Canal, and Europe, their political importance, may be of more value to Canada in the future than their commercial advantages," declared Mr. Crowe, who has been advocating for some time that there should be a closer political union between Canada and the British Islands.

The Sugar Trade

One of the basic factors in the West India trade is sugar, and Mr. Crowe proceeded to point out how he believed the present status of the sugar trade between those islands and the Dominion was an obstacle to a full development of that trade. He said: "If all tariff barriers between Canada and the British West Indies were removed and the sugar refined where the raw material is produced, as in some other tropical countries like the Hawaiian Islands, the saving of duty, handling charges, freight on moisture and the difference in the cost of labor, would soon reduce the price of sugar that our Annapolis Valley and other fruit belts in this great northern fruit-producing country, would flourish with preserving industries and greatly stimulate their production, making Canada famous as an exporter of jams and jellies, confectionery, biscuits, etc. Moreover, the increased value and production of this staple product in the British West Indies would greatly increase the purchasing power of these Islands for Canadian agriculture and manufactured products."

Trade Agreement Failure

"Canada is not alive to her trade possibilities with the 2,000,000 consumers in the British West Indies," stated Mr. Crowe. "Canada is woefully behind the United States in transportation facilities and in her efforts to meet the requirements of the West Indies, hence the United States continues to control the commerce of the West Indies, notwithstanding the Canadian and West Indian trade agreement, which I regard as a great failure." Mr. Crowe vigorously asserted, "as it has resulted in a heavy loss in maintaining the steamship service provided for under the terms of the agreement, and a great loss of revenue to the countries concerned, without compensating advantages in trade.

"The largest and most important island is threatening to have the agreement annulled," he said, "because of the heavy claims to be suffering as a result of Canada's interpretation of the treaty, particularly with regard to the importation of sugar which gives our sugar refineries almost a stranglehold upon the producer and also the consumer."

Recalls Gladstone's Argument. In his argument with regard to free sugar, Mr. Crowe referred to Gladstone's argument at the time of the protest made by the English sugar refining interest against the free admission of German bounty-fed sugar; namely, that the employment of labor and the capital employed in the preserving industry was more important than the refining of sugar in home refineries—applies with equal force to Canada at this time, when we are so much in need of industries to provide employment and also a profitable home market for the products of our fruit and wheat belts.

Mr. Crowe closely linked the commercial relationship between the two countries with that of their eventual political union.

In this regard he said, "The study of the economic possibilities of the British possession in the Western Hemisphere cannot help convince one that conditions are ripe for the constructive experiment of the building up of a British North American Confederation and a GREATER CANADA. The achievement of this ideal would open up a new epoch in the history of our Empire—it would bring into existence in the Western Hemisphere a powerful rival to the United States, larger in area, equal in economic resources and variety of climate, as closely knit in a political sense, as progressive in its ideas and a great instrument for the material and moral elevation of populations that owe allegiance in this part of the world to the British flag."—Canada-West India Magazine.

Workingmen Guests of Peers at Club

LUNCHEON GIVEN TO CELEBRATE REFACING OF CARLTON CLUB.

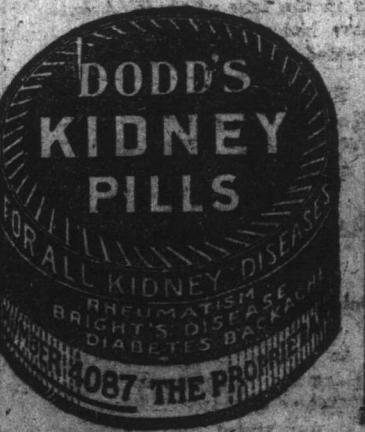

Fifty-five working men sat in the austere grandeur of the Carlton Club eating hors d'oeuvres and all the delicacies of the finest cuisine. "It almost made me cry, and I'll bet all the wives are jealous. They can wait sixty years and it will not happen again," said Arthur Torode, foreman painter, describing his feelings at the function, which was given to commemorate the completion of the refacing work.

Members of what Lord Claud Hamilton described as the "most aristocratic and exclusive club in the world" sat down to the side with the workmen. Viscount Younger presided at one table, supported on either side by two foremen. Lord Claud Hamilton sat at another.

Whiskey And Beer. His brother, Lord Frederick Hamilton, presided at a third, and Sir N. Jodrell at a fourth. There were in all six tables.

Members and guests exchanged stories, and any fear that the men would feel uneasy soon disappeared. "What did you think of Lord Claud Hamilton?" I asked a painter who had sat opposite him.

"I thought he was a very nice old chap," was the reply. "Most witty at times, and quite an entertainer." Cigarettes and cigars were handed round after the health of the King had been proposed. A number of speeches followed.
