Them intended to hecoginize their services by grants of land. Touching on the paper pulp industry, Mr.Clifford remarked that the facilities for that industry in Cassiar were un-surpassed. While the mountains were destined to become the treasure houses of the world, the valleys were unequal-led for their tertility, and might be util-ized for agriculture and fruit growing, if access was afforded by a railway. Along the coast the fishing industry, still in its infancy, has assumed important proportions, and promises to become in time the centre of the salmon canning industry. Along the coast are immense areas of sprüce of a superior character, ABSOLUTE Just the material required for pulp. The mining industry on the Skeena and in Just the material required for pulp. The nining industry on the Skeena and in the parts, is progressing satisfactorily, but cannot be expected to reach large proportions until it is given railway comto unication. The Boers

The press gallery is not the most desir-able place in the house from which to fol-low the proceedings. The clerk of the house, who sits immediately beneath the gallery, is inaudible to the reporters, and unless a member speaks in full voice, many of his remarks are lost. Much speculation is heard in the lobbles as to the government's railway policy. Some wild guesses are being made, but as the members of the executive and those in
