CHINESE WARRIORS.

"They are not as good sailors, but they have greater endurance."
"Here they any pluck?"
"Plenty of it in defending themselves about decks. The white sailors do not impose on them aboard ship. They can take their own part every time. If you compare them in this respect with Frenchmen I should say that in a stand-up fight the Chinaman would knock out his opponent. But when you come to man a ship with Chinese and expect them to make a first-class crew, you find yourself in a bad pre-licament. The Chinese navy has no show whatever against the French. Their navy a composed of two classes of ships, the composed of two classes of ships, the steamers and the junks. The junks re well represented by the pictures you have seen in books of travel. They are all armed with six or eight guns each, but what can they do? So far they have served as coffins for their crews who were drowned after they had surrendered. lany of the iron steamers were built in ngland. They were constructed on exbellent principles, and are very fine ships.
They are armed with heavy modern guns.
White men were engaged to train the crews. But with all that the ships and the crews are not a match for the great iron-clads of the French fleet. The num-ber of iron steamers in the Chinese navy is very large. They have launched six or very large. They have launched six or eight gunboats themselves at Shanghai the past year to my knowledge. These boats were built under the direction of European and American naval architects. They are first-class of their kind, but they are too small. China has no hope at sea."

"You have seen the Chinese troops?"

"Yes. They are uniformed in the hues of the rainbow, besides black and white." Imagine 100 laundrymen in scarlet bloades and royal purple trousers drawn up in line, adjoining them a company in pure white, then a company in bright green, and then one in light blue, and you have a Chicese regiment. When they march they lift up their feet like cats in the snow. But in spite of these peculiarities, they will make the warm for the French on shore. "I Love Her Better Than Life." —Well, then, why don't you do something to bring back the roses to her cheeks and the light to her eyes? Don't you see she is suffering from nervous debility, the result of female weakness? A bottle of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will brighten those pale cheeks and send new life through that wasting form. If you love her, take heed.

It Was Too Long. From the Pittsburg Chronicle. "In soft, adumbrant meshes of sieved silver the sunbeams melted through the leaves and dripped in spangles of gold upon the brown and black moquettrie of shadows that led to the ragged edge of the curb where a fragile little fragment of humanity lay moaning."

"That's all right enough," said the managing editor, "but it's a little too long. Make it shorter."

"But what will I say, sir?" asked the blonde reporter.

'Oh. I'd just say 'Hennessy Mulcahey's little boy Pat fell into an open sewer and broke his nose.' That'll do for an introduction, and then you can go on and say what's necessary about the careless manner in which these things are conducted, and that under another administration of our local government, and so on, you know. Give 'em a rap, that's all."
