I like your hives the best of any I have seen. I attended the exhibition at Toronto last fall and saw the other makes but your goods suit me the best.

Cuban girls are carefully shielded from the world, the prevailing customs in regard to chaperonage being similar to the French. Children of Cuban parents are accustomed to being indulged to such a degree that they grow up timid and dependent, though warm-hearted, passionate and affectionate.

Cossack regiments are being drilled in crossing rivers on a novel sort of improvised bridge. Seven or eight lances are passed between the handles and tops of a dozen cooking kettles and are held firmly in place by the handles, and are, besides, tied together by forage ropes. A dozen bundles of these lances fastened together form one section of a raft or floating bridge, which it has been found will support a weight of half a ton. A section can be put together in twenty-five minutes.
